Much of the fabric of America's destiny down through the years has been woven by its courageous immigrants, many of whom left their homeland with only pennies in their pockets and a dream in their hearts, men and women who asked for nothing more than the opportunity to share in the building of a great nation in the New World, where an individual could rise to the height of achievement according to his own ability and perseverance and freely hold moral ideals and religious convictions.

Yes, our Nation is unique in the history of mankind, it is a single masterpiece land made mosaic built by many nationalities, religions, cultures ... a land built by immigrants and descendents of immigrants united in their efforts to achieve a better way of life, and united in their desire to share these benefits with people from all parts of the earth.

Should we not be proud that we American Serbs contributed toward this great achievement . From the early Serbian pioneers working in the mines, restaurants and fields, through their descendents who are holding high positions in government, industry, business, religious or social institutions, we left a unique and indelible imprint upon the mosaic of which this Nation is made of. Within it the First Serbian Benevolent Society has a particular spot, since it modeled a road for other Serbian organizations in America, the most important trail of unifying Serbian communities, preserving heritage, and building the character of the pioneer's brotherhood where exists the recognition of the worth and dignity of each of their fellows.

The founders of the First Serbian Benevolent Society are of course long gone, but the mark of the ideas they bore is still upon the members and those who continue to remember and not overlook the men of great importance whose influence has helped shape our wonderful country.

By celebrating the 100th Anniversary, keeping the memory of those men, and for real understanding and appreciation of their work and efforts, it is our purpose to review some of the conditions and events of early history made by the American Serbs. It was our obligation and duty to collect and preserve as much as possible documentations from our past, living the present to be judged by the future generations.

We were very fortunate to have among third generation of society members, our young Stanford graduated historian, Nicholas Vucinich. It is very seldom to find an American born Serb so well informed and dedicated to the history of the Serbian life in America. Through his knowledge and research work it was possible to publish this book and his pen brings back memories when the cornerstones of the Serbian activities were placed. Our young author accepted this task and completed the book to be ready for the Centennial celebration.

In the name of myself, as President, and all the members of the Centennial committee, we express our appreciation to Nicholas Vucinich and his book co-chairman, Chedo Ristich, who spent hundreds of hours in collecting, translating and accumulating the membership list.

Within the last decade FSBS made a strong move to regain leadership position and reinstate some of the functions, junior order, scholarship fund, celebration of Krsna Slava, contributions, bulletins, memorial services etc. This was possible only through sound, strong, active and consistent leadership, which is the secret to success in reaching goals of any "people oriented" group, which the full Board of FSBS provided. My special thanks to three people who were of inestimable value to me. My vice-president Lazar J. Krzich, always alive with new ideas for improvement and with whom I shared many happy and sad moments within the Society, but together resolved many obstacles and brought closer the real meaning of Serbian brotherhood. Michael Djordjevich, serving as vice-president treasurer of Firemans' Fund, always finds time to be a constant supporter and as Society treasurer, continually kept us abreast of our financial situation, a tremendous undertaking, yet handled in stride by this excellent businessman in the field of finances. And to Society past president and one of the most active Serbs in any organization Svetozar J. Sherovich. In addition, I express my appreciation to the every member of the Board of Directors; who carries the obligations and duties toward Society beyond expectation: Bob Konevich, Petar Lucich, Miro Medan, Jefto Davidovich, George Alexich, John Girish, Dragan Milojkovich, Deyan Bunjevich and Nick Milicevich.

I am very honored and proud to be a part of this hard working group and the First Serbian Benevolent Society and all our membership.

The survival of the nation or an organization depends upon the continued renewal of and strengthening the qualities of character that made American Serbs great for over the past hundred years. The world is full of Serbian enemies, individuals who take delight in "tearing down" by spreading gossip, repeating half-truths and rank fabrications. They spread uncertainty and doubt among those who are constantly trying to keep the of freedom and our American - Serbian heritage burning brightly. We hope that this book will be a small candle light to guide those who reject false statements and who respect our great past history, dedication and efforts of the Serbian pioneers, and to stimulate a new awareness of the American-Serbian Heritage.

Let's keep reminding ourselves that the purpose of the First Serbian Benevolent Society is to unite good men of Serbian origin and to continue to build and contribute to a deeper appreciation of what made our country so great, and to renewed vigor in making most effective our basic principles and ideals. One day we all will be gone, but the torch of American Serbs must continue brightly to shine. Remember we build not alone for ourselves, but learning from the past, we build for the generations who will follow us.

Preface

When in November of 1979 I was asked by the President and Vice President of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, Milorad Golubovich and Lazar Krzich to assist in the preparation of a commemorative history for the occasion of the Society's Centennial in May of 1980, I felt honored to be considered for such a task, and excited by the prospect of doing research and writing on a topic that has been of longstanding interest to me. I was also pleased that the oldest Serbian society in America would be the first to publish a historical study on American Serbs.

Within the limited time available it was not possible to produce a complete and comprehensive history of the Serbs in California or of the activities of the First Serbian Benevolent Society. Therefore, many of the worthy accomplishments of the society and its individual members have not been documented. It is hoped, however, that this study provides a perspective of the contributions of the Society and its members to Serbian institutions throughout American and particularly the western United States. Hopefully the publication of this volume will stimulate further research in these areas.

Serbian immigrants and their descendents have been living in California for the past 130 years. It is my hope that by publication of this book we not only honor the worthy founders, officers and members of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, but that this book may contribute in a small way to a better understanding of the history of Serbs in America, and to the history of California and the West.

The primary sources of information for the study have been the minutes, correspondence, and other records of the First Serbian Benevolent society. A number of Serbian language newspapers that were published in the Bay Area were helpful, although none of these papers (Sloboda, Srbin Amerikanac, Draskova Sloga, Mjera, Silni Dusan, Srpska Nezavisnost or the Srpski and Jugoslovenski Glasnik) are available in their complete runs. I also used the principal San Francisco dailies dating back to the Society's founding.

A major source of material on the Society's history has been a booklet written by Vladimir P. Popovich, in Serbian-cyrillic, entitled Zivot i Rad Srpsko-Crnogorskog Literarnog i Dobrotvornog Drustva u San Francisku (The Life and Work of the Serbian Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society in San Francisco), Oakland, 1905, which was published for the occasion of the Society's 25th anniversary. This book is a compilation of material extracted from the first 25 years of the Society's minutes.

Sections of this book were extracted and added to for a special supplement in the "Srpski Glasnik" (Serbian Herald) for the Society's 50th anniversary, and this article was translated to English and brought up to date for the Society's 75th anniversary, and again published in the then "Jugoslav American Herald" of San Francisco. Due to the relative inaccessability of these articles and Vladimir Popovich's book, and in keeping with the Society's tradition, I have used them with some additions and editing for the basis of chapter four.

As the principal author of this book, I extend my gratitude to Milorad Golubovich and Lazar Krzich who entrusted me with this endeavor, and have assisted and supported me to its completion. It is due to their efforts and the Society's support that publication of this book was made possible.

My special and most heartfelt appreciation is extended to Ched Ristich who, as a member of the Centennial Book Committee, graciously and unselfishly offered his assistance throughout the project. Without the countless hours he spent extracting and translating information from the Society's records and other sources, and in assisting in the collection of materials, it would have been virtually impossible to complete so much research in such a short period of time. I would also like to thank his daughter Melissa Ristich for typing the manuscript, and for working under extremely short notice.

I also extend my gratitude to V. Rev. Dusan Bunjevich, who allowed us the use of many materials from the library of St. John the Baptist Serbian Orthodox Church in San Francisco; to Adam S. Eterovich, an authority on the history of South Slavs in the western United States, who made available many excellent photographs, and other historical documents relating to Serbs in California; and to all the individuals who donated photographs for the book: Amelia Bojanich, Mike Brdar, Jerome Davidovich, Bob Konevich, Milton Lepetich, Mr. and Mrs. Nikola Mandich, Larry Mialovich, Phyllis Mead, Petar and Vera Pavlovich, Vera Vucinich, and Dan and Mary Zlokovich.

Origins of the Serbian Community in the San Francisco Bay Area, and the First Serbian Societies
in America

The formation of the San Francisco Bay Area Serbian Community dates from the discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill in 1848. Serbs were to be found among the State's pioneers, and a Serbian-American community has continuously existed in California from its entrance into statehood to the present day.

Among the Serbian settlements of the United States, the San Francisco Bay Area has played a major role. In the early period of immigration, lasting to about 1900, the Bay Area contained one of the larger Serbian communities in America. San Francisco was also the center for all the Serbian settlements in the surrounding mining and agricultural districts of California and neighboring states.

In the Bay Area and Northern California, were established the first Serbian institutions in America; the first Serbian society, the first Serbian Orthodox Church, the first Serbian language newspapers, the first Serbian women's society, and the first Serbian school. The first significant generation of American-born Serbs was to be found in California. The earliest known Americans of Serbian parentage were born in California at least 120 years ago, among them the first American-born Serbian Orthodox priest, Archimandrite Sebastian Dabovich.¹

The earliest Serbian immigrants to settle in California were natives of the southern part of the Adriatic coast of present day Yugoslavia, from the region of Boka Kotorska (Bay of Kotor) and Pastrovich. They originated from such picturesque coastal towns as Herceg Novi, Risan, Kotor, Budva, and Petrovac, famed for their experienced seamen. They were among the first South Slavs to reach the New World, serving as sailors and officers on ships that traded with various ports of the emerging American Republic.

Little more than one month after John Marshall first discovered the glittering yellow flakes of gold in the American River, an article was published in the Belgrade journal Podunavka of March 5, 1848 entitled "Srbli u Americi" (Serbs in America). The author was S. Popovich, and may have been Spiro Popovich, a prominent Dalmatian Serb leader of the Illyrian movement. He describes the communities of Serbs residing in the United States at this time and estimates their numbers, stating that most of them were natives of Dalmatia and Boka Kotorska. The city with the largest number was New Orleans with 300. It is difficult to assess the accuracy of Popovich's figures, and it is probable that he included both Orthodox Serbs and Roman Catholic Croats in his estimate, nevertheless, the article indicates the existence of a substantial Serbian settlement in America at the outset of the California Gold Rush.²

Many of the earliest Serbian pioneers to settle in California came by way of New Orleans and other southern ports. When John Tadich, a prominent San Franciscan of Yugoslav origin arrived here in 1871, he asked his uncle why New Orleans was such a frequent topic of conversation among South Slavs in San Francisco. Tadich was told that most of the earliest pioneers had come from New Orleans.³

The name of one of the early Presidents of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, Lazar Jovovich, is found on the rolls of the Confederate Army from Louisiana. He served as a Lieutenant in the Cognevich (Konjevich) company, Fourth Regiment, European Brigade of the Louisiana Militia.⁴

Lazar Jovovich was born in Kameno, Herceg Novi, Boka Kotorska. He arrived in San Francisco in 1865 at the conclusion of the American Civil War. He was a prominent merchant, and was like many of the early pioneers in that he was involved in the coffee trade. He served as President of the First Serbian Benevolent Society for six terms, 1886-1889-1891-1892-1893 and 1896. He was also a member of the Serbian Literary Club, and was one of the earliest members of the Orthodox Church and Benevolent Society, joining on the date of that organization's incorporation, in 1867.

When Lazar Jovovich died in 1899, at the age of 63, the local San Francisco paper the Call carried an article along with a photograph of Lazar Jovovich entitled "Serbians Lose a Faithful Friend." He was described as "one of the most prominent members of the local Slavonian colony ..." The article went on to state that:

"Among his countrymen he was known over the entire United States for his deeds of charity and kindness. No Slavonian ever appealed to him for assistance and went away with his appeal unanswered; and in many cases he had been known to have established his countrymen in business ..."⁵

The Serbian pioneers of San Francisco and Northern California, were found in various occupations. Many were engaged in business as fruit brokers and packers, importers and exporters, liquor merchants, restaurateurs, saloon keepers, and coffee house proprietors.⁶

Attracted by the fabulous mineral wealth of the western United States, the Serbian pioneers were scattered throughout the mining districts of California, Nevada, and other states, as miners, prospectors, and merchants.

Serbian miners and merchants could be found in virtually every important mineral discovery in the West from the California Gold Rush and the Nevada Comstock lode in the 1850's and 1860's to the Alaskan and Yukon Gold Rushes, and Tonopah and Goldfield strikes in Nevada around the turn of the century. A number of Serbian owned mining companies were formed, bearing such names as "The Servia and Slavonia Mining Company."⁷ Serbian Orthodox Churches were established in the Mother Lode gold mining towns of Jackson and Angels Camp, California and western copper mining camps Butte, Montana and Bisbee, Arizona.

In 1897 at the outset of Alaska's famous Gold Rush, a society of Serbian goldminers was organized in San Francisco, for the purpose of traveling to Alaska to mine for gold. It was called the Serbian Gold Miners Union, and consisted of 100 Serbian miners.⁸ Shortly after the turn of the century, the Alaska Serbs, with the aid of Father Sebastian Dabovich, built a small Serbian Orthodox Church, and dedicated it to St. Sava.⁹

Serbs were prominent business and civic leaders in a number of western communities. A Nevada newspaper of the 1890's reported on the visit of San Francisco wine merchant, and distinguished member of the Serbian Society, Ilija Chelovich and his wife, to the ranch of John Chiatovich of Silver Peak. The paper described Chiatovich as "a cattleman, rancher, and capitalist, the kind of man Nevada needs more of."¹⁰

The Serbian pioneers of the West became American citizens and took an active role in the political life of their adopted country. The 1892 polling places for Esmeralda County, Nevada were listed as: Chiatovich's office, inspectors C.L. Vucanovich and John Chiatovich, and Vucovich's store, inspectors M. Vucovich and A. Bacoeh."¹¹

John Gregovich, a pioneer Nevada citizen and honorary member of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, served as a State Senator in the Nevada legislature during the 1890's.¹² An early member of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, Jovo A. Ljubibratic was elected Vice-Mayor of Butte, Montana in 1900.¹³

John Gregovich

Originating from the Adriatic coastal regions where the cultivation of grapes and other Mediterranean crops were well established, California Serbs played an important role in the development of the state's rich agriculture. Serbs established numerous ranches in California's San Joaquin and Santa Clara Valleys. The "Fresno Beauty" grape variety was originally named the "Serbian Beauty", and was introduced into California by a Serb named Stevan Todorovich. Stevan N. Mitrovich, a native of Sveti Stefan, Boka Kotorska, a participant in the Montenegrin-Turkish War in 1877, and a Balkan War volunteer from America in 1912, introduced to California the "Adriatic Fig", winner of the Gold Medal at the Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893.

Until 1880, the early Serbian immigrants, mostly from Boka Kotorska and Pastrovich, banded together with other South Slavs, predominantly Dalmatian Croats, to form Slavonic Benevolent Societies. This occurred in California and Louisiana. The first of these societies was the Slavonic Illyric Mutual and Benevolent Society organized in San Francisco on November 17, 1857. It is still in existence today as the Slavonic Mutual and Benevolent Society.

Coming from the same Adriatic coastal areas, the early Serb and Croat immigrants to America were influenced by Illyrian and Pan-Slavonic movements that dominated literature and political thought in Dalmatia, at the time. An excellent description of the relations between the early Serbs and Croat pioneers is found in the reminiscences of John Tadich, the prominent San Francisco restaurateur, and a native of Dalmatia.

In 1872, while a young boy, I was working for John Milovich, a pioneer member of the Slavonic Mutual Benevolent Society and an old miner, an American citizen of strong and independent American patriotism who was born in Montenegro, that country from which so many great warriors have come. In fact, John Milovich was known among his friends as 'od Grahova Jovo, valjan junak bio' (John of Grahovo, a real hero). I learned to my surprise that John Milovich belonged to the Orthodox Church and that he was assumed erroneously to be a Greek. But how in the world could he have been a Greek when he came from Montenegro from whence came so many good Yugoslavs?...

While I was working for John Milovich, I came in contact with all the Orthodox Yugoslavs (Pravoslavni) in San Francisco, at the time, young and old. They spoke the same Slavic language as I spoke. I saw them and talked with them daily. I heard them converse on different subjects, principally on politics. I heard them sing of their national heroes. They sang of Kraljevic Marko, Milos Obilic and others...

I often heard these Pravoslavni speak with sadness of the great loss of the Serbian Empire 'na Kosovo Polje' on the Plain of Kosovo... ¹⁴

John Milovich was one of the earliest members of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, joining in December of 1880.

From the 1850's to the time of the Austro-Hungarian occupation of the provinces of Bosnia and Hercegovina, in 1878, the early South Slavic immigrants remained together in Slavonic Benevolent societies, also organizing Slavonic libraries and reading rooms. The Serbs were also major factors in the organization of the essentially Pan-Orthodox Russian and Greek Orthodox Church parishes in San Francisco and New Orleans during the 1860's.

At the time of the Hercegovinian insurrection and Montenegrin and Serbian Wars against the Turks, 1875-1878, Pan Slavic committees were formed in San Francisco to collect and send aid and volunteers to the Balkan battlefields.¹⁵

The organization of the first distinctly Serbian society in America, then known as the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society of San Francisco, in 1880, came about at the same time as a number of important historical developments.

In 1878, the Austro-Hungarian military authorities occupied the South Slavic provinces of Bosnia and Hercegovina, instituting policies of "Divide and Rule", and compulsory military service, particularly resented by the Serbs. In Dalmatia the Serbs organized separate political parties and newspapers in 1878 and 1880.

Serbian immigration to the United States increased substantially beginning in the 1880's. A significant portion of the newer immigration originated in the newly occupied districts of Hercegovina, where emigration began immediately after the occupation.

Of the eight founding members of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, six were from Boka Kotorska: Antonije Vukasovich, Krsto Gopchevich, Jovo Pavkovich, Rade Begovich, Jovan and Vladimir Jovovich. Djuro S. Martinovich was from Montenegro, and Mihail Rashkovich from Vojvodina, a rarity in a colony overwhelmingly by origin from Boka Kotorska, Hercegovina and Montenegro.

Immigration from Hercegovina increased steadily after 1880 (some Hercegovinians had come as early as the 1860's, but most began arriving after 1878), and to this day Serbs from Montenegro, Hercegovina and Boka Kotorska and their American-born descendants have comprised the greatest number of the First Serbian Benevolent Society's members.

This is not to say that the First Serbian Benevolent Society has ever been a regionally based organization, nor is it an exclusively Serbian organization. The By-Laws of the Society provide for admission to membership of not only Serbs, but other individuals of Slavic descent. The membership of the First Serbian Benevolent Society has been drawn from every Serbian region and has included non-Serbs, among them Russians and Roman Catholic Croats.

A significant proportion of the Society's membership has been made up of Dalmatian Croats from Central Dalmatia and the Adriatic Island of Brac, men who formed the major element of the Slavonic Society. The First Serbian Benevolent Society has also had a number of Roman Catholic presidents.

Still, as much as 90 percent of the membership of the First Serbian Benevolent Society came from, or are descendants of people who came from the same area on and inland from the southern part of the Adriatic coast of present day Yugoslavia. They come from the small coastal towns and villages that surround the beautiful Boka Kotorska (Bay of Kotor) with its fjord-like bays and majestic mountains. They come from small mountain villages, just inland from the coast, from the south-eastern Hercegovinian districts of Trebinje, Bileca, and Ljubinje, and from the environs of the former capital of small, yet heroic Montenegro, Cetinje.

This entire area was an integral part of the Medieval Serbian Empire, ruled by the Nemanjich dynasty. The area had previously comprised the early Serbian principalities of Zeta and Travunija.

From the breakup of the Medieval Serbian Empire in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries to the emergence of the modern south Slavic state, Yugoslavia, in 1918 (then known as the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes) most of this area was controlled by a variety of foreign powers. The exception was Montenegro, whose tribes were able to maintain a degree of autonomy that brought about the development of Montenegro into an independent state, ruled by Bishops of the Serbian Orthodox Church and eventually secular princes and kings descended from the Petrovich-Njegosh family.

The coastal region of Boka Kotorska, which includes Pastrovich, was long ruled by the Venetians who were later replaced by the Austrians. Although a number of other powers, most notably Spain, France and Russia, became involved in this region from time to time.

The region of Boka Kotorska has been inhabited by Serbs for centuries, and played an important cultural and commercial role in the medieval Serbian state under the Nemanjich dynasty. Approximately 80 percent of the populace is Serbian Orthodox, and of the remaining 20 percent who are mostly Roman Catholic there are many individuals who considered themselves Serbs of the Catholic faith, and who celebrated the traditional Serbian practice of the family Patron Saint Day (Krsna Slava).

The majority of Boka's present inhabitants are descendants of Montenegrin and Hercegovinian Serbs who moved from the mountains down to the coastland. Among the founders of the First Serbian Benevolent Society were a number of men: Jovovich, Begovich, Gophevich, who trace their ancestry to proud Montenegrin clans.

Jovan Pavkovich was descended from one of the most prominent families in the district of Herceg Novi. From this family was the famous sea captain and mayor of Herceg Novi, Leso Pavkovich.

Jovan Pavkovich donated 80,000 gold crowns to his native village in 1904 (see Nakicenovic, Pop Sava, Boka, Srpski Etnografski/Zbornik, 1913 p. 493). The Pavkovich family settled in the village Podi in 1720. By origin they were from Popovo Polje, Hercegovina.

The family of Antonije Vukasovich, another of the Society's founders and its first president, was an old and prominent family in the Herceg Novi district of Boka Kotorska.

The history of the Boka Kotorska region is closely connected with the history of Montenegro and Hercegovina, and frequent attempts were made to unite the Bokelian Serbs with their Montenegrin brothers. Today Boka Kotorska is a part of the Yugoslav Republic of Montenegro and this sunny coastline is one of the Republic's major tourist attractions.

The history of Hercegovina, which was ruled by the Ottoman Turks to 1878, was marked by frequent revolts against Ottoman and later Hapsburg rule. The Serbs of Hercegovina were closely tied with Montenegrins and often declared their allegiance to the Montenegrin rulers.

Most of Hercegovina was occupied by the Austro-Hungarian Army in 1878. A portion was annexed to Montenegro. In 1882, the Serbs of Eastern Hercegovina revolted against the Austro-Hungarian policy of compulsory military service. Many Hercegovinian Serbs, in fact, emigrated to escape conscription into the Austro-Hungarian Army.¹⁶

Other reasons for emigration from these areas were the scarcity of good soil, crop failures, in particular the destruction of the vineyards by the grape insect "phylloxera" in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, and the decline in importance of many of the coastal towns during the nineteenth century.¹⁷

When the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society was organized in San Francisco, in 1880, it was the first and only Serbian society in the United States. Less than a year later, in 1881, a Serbian-Montenegrin Benevolent Society was organized in Chicago, which was to become one of the most important Serbian centers in the United States. The minutes of the San Francisco Society note this, and describe how the Chicago Society was to be sent a copy of the Society's By-Laws.

The Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society in San Francisco and the Serbian-Montenegrin Benevolent Society in Chicago were the only Serbian societies in existence in America prior to the 1890's. The two societies corresponded a number of times over the years, and it appears that the makeup of their membership and the nature of their activities were quite similar.¹⁸ The Chicago Society was reorganized in 1894, and exists today as the Serbian Benevolent Society "Jedinstvo" (Unity) in Chicago.

On August 1, 1893, Serbs living in California's Mother Lode Country organized a Serbian Benevolent Society in Angels Camp, drawing its membership primarily from Serbs living in Calaveras, Amador, and Tuolumne Counties. At the same time, the St. Sava Serbian Orthodox Church was organized in Jackson, Amador County.

The lodge in Angels Camp was to join a short lived federation with the Chicago Society in the early 1900's, Prvi Srpski Bratski Dobrotvorni Savez (The First Serbian Fraternal Benevolent Federation). The Angels Camp Society, for a time, had branches in Jackson, San Francisco, and Quartz Mountain, California, and Douglas, Alaska, altogether with 300 members, natives of Boka Kotorska, Hercegovina, Montenegro and Serbia.¹⁹

When the Prvi Srpski Bratski Dobrotvorni Savez went out of existence in 1909, the Angels Camp Society centered its activities in Calaveras, Amador and Tuolumne Counties, as an independent Serbian Benevolent Society. In 1930, the 39 remaining members of this society were accepted into the membership of the First Serbian Benevolent Society of San Francisco.

The Serbian Societies in San Francisco, Chicago and Angels Camp were the first in America, and all cooperated with and recognized each other. St.

Sava's Day celebrations of the San Francisco Society, in the 1890's, were characterized by toasts to the brotherly Serbian-Montenegrin Benevolent Society in Chicago and Serbian Benevolent Society in Angels Camp.²⁰

Pioneer Serbian Literary Activities in San Francisco

As with most other Serbian institutions in America, so too with literary and journalistic activities, the beginnings can be traced to the San Francisco Bay Area.

The first known reference to the publication of a Serbian language book in America is found in the Alaska Herald of San Francisco in 1869. In it we find the announcement of a book entitled Sloboda (Freedom), written by the Slavonians of San Francisco and dedicated to Prince Nicholas I of Montenegro.²¹

It is possible that the publication of this book was connected with the uprising of the Serbs in the Krivosije Region of Boka Kotorska (Bay of Kotor), which began earlier that year. The uprising had grown out of the policy of military conscription instituted by the Austrian authorities. The struggles of these Bokelian Serbs aroused a good deal of patriotic sentiment in surrounding areas and most especially in neighboring Montenegro. The majority of Serbs living in the San Francisco Bay Area in 1869 were natives of Boka Kotorska.

The Serbs and other South Slavs of San Francisco, following the practice that was common in Dalmatia at the time, banded together in December 22, 1869 to form the "Slavenska Citaonica" in San Francisco with the object: "To establish a library and reading room for the use of persons belonging to the Slavonic race and others who may be permitted to enjoy the benefits of the same. Number of members twenty. Rooms, 619 Montgomery Street, San Francisco."²²

This was the first South Slavic library in America. In 1893, on the initiative of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, a Serbian reading room and library were established.

Another very early Serbian language publication appeared in Chicago in December of 1876. Published at the time of the Hercegovinian (Nevesinje) uprising and Montenegrin-Turkish War, it was entitled Ustasi, Ili Borba Krsta Protivu Polumeseca, (Insurgents, or the Struggle of the Cross Versus the Crescent.) This small booklet was in the form of a poem written in honor of the Serbs from Hercegovina and Montenegro who were fighting the Turks in 1876. In this poem were mentioned a number of the most prominent Montenegrin and Hercegovinian leaders, including Peko Pavlovich and Stojan Kovacevich. The term Ustasi, was used here in its original meaning, insurgent, rather than its more common present usage, relating to a 20th century Croatian, anti-Yugoslav and anti-Serb separatist political movement. It is worthy of mention here because the principal author was Mihail A. Rashkovich, one of the founders in 1880 of the First Serbian Benevolent Society of San Francisco.

The first newspaper published by a Serb in America was in Italian rather than Serbian. Velimir Chelovich was born in Risan, Boka Kotorska and educated in Trieste. He arrived in San Francisco in 1857 and soon afterward became an Italian language newspaper editor, one of the pioneers of Italian journalism in America.²³ appeared in San Francisco in May of 1870. It seems as though the paper was sponsored by the Russian Orthodox parish in San Francisco, and its lifespan was very short. Still, this is the first example we have of a newspaper printed in the Serbian language in America. While not exclusively Serbian, it was published in three languages; Russian, English, and Slavonian (Serbian.) Its appearance was noted by newspapers in Serbia.²⁴

A newspaper named Slavjanin (The Slavonian)

While these early examples of literary activity are very interesting and deserving of further research, the true start of Serbian-American journalism begins with the appearance of two papers. Srbin Amerikanac (Serb-American), and Sloboda (Freedom) in San Francisco in 1893.

Prior to the appearance of Srbin Amerikanac and Sloboda, there had been a number of other short-lived journalistic attempts. In San Francisco for a time were published three newspapers with the word sloga (unity) in their headings; Nasa or Narodna Sloga (Our Unity), Draskova Sloga (Drasko's Unity) and Slavjanska Sloga (Slavonic Unity). All three appeared to be written in a Pan-Slavic or Dalmatian-Croat vein.

Srbin Amerikanac made its appearance in May of 1893. After its first year of publication it tended to appear sporadically, and went out of existence sometime in the nineties.

The editor of the Srbin Amerikanac was Bozo Gopceovich, an early member of the Serbian Society, and a brother of one of the Society's founders, Krsto Gopceovich, who was also involved with this paper. The Gopceovich (also written, Gopchevich and Gobchevich) brothers were natives of Orahovac, Boka Kotorska. Bozo came to relatives in New Orleans as a young man, settling in San Francisco in the 1870's, with some time spent as a silver miner in Virginia City and Esmeralda County, Nevada. He was reputed to be one of San Francisco's wealthiest Serbs. Although, well up in years at the time, he returned to his homeland as a volunteer for the Serbian army during the Balkan Wars.

Krsto Gopceovich also served as editor of the Srbina Amerikanac, and for a brief time published a satirical journal entitled Mjera (The Measure). He later moved to Chicago, where he became one of the founders of the Serbian Society Balkan of South Chicago in 1899, and finally to Pueblo, Colorado, where he died in 1903.²⁵

The exploits of the Gopceovich brothers, which included brothers Petar and Milos in San Francisco, and Andrija in Boka, frequently drew the attention of the major San Francisco papers.²⁶ Their activities, and the editorial content of their newspaper, were characterized by a good deal of controversy, and they were frequently at odds with the leadership of the Serbian Society and the editors of San Francisco's other Serbian language newspaper Sloboda.

Sloboda made its appearance in August of 1893. From then until the 1906 earthquake and fire put a temporary stop to Serbian journalism in San Francisco, it remained one of the most important Serbian publications in America. As the newspaper's heading stated, it was "the organ of the Serbian colony in America and the largest circulation of any Slavonic paper west of the Mississippi."

The publication of Sloboda grew out of the activities of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, and the organization of a Serbian library and reading room in San Francisco. Among the editors of Sloboda were some of the most prominent members and officers of the Serbian Society, Lazar S. Churich, Vladimir P. Popovich, Veljko Radojevich, and Spiro and Krsto Radulovich.²⁷ It was also edited for a time by Spiro Srzentich, a student at the University of California at Berkeley and an officer in the American Army at the time of the Spanish-

American War.²⁸

Of all these individuals, the one most closely associated with the publication of Sloboda was Spiro Radulovich, its longtime owner and editor. Radulovich was born in 1860 in the village of Mojdez near Herceg Novi, Boka Kotorska. Becoming a seaman in his youth, he arrived in San Francisco, in 1876, later establishing a business with his brothers, Krsto, Lazar, and Marko.

At his home at Pacific and Polk Streets in San Francisco were located both his business and printing shop. It was one of the major meeting places for Serbs in the San Francisco community.

Spiro was a longtime member of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, the Serbian Society Zmaj which later was accepted into the First Serbian Benevolent Society, and the Masonic Order. He was one of the true pioneers of Serbian journalism in America.²⁹

Sloboda had direct contact with the leading Serbian publications in the homeland: Glas Crnogoraca (Montenegrin Voice) in Cetinje, Srbobran (Serb Defender) in Zagreb, Zastava (The Flag) in Novi Sad, the organ of the Dalmatian Serbs, Srpski Glas (Serbian Voice), and all the major Belgrade papers. In the United States it had agents located all over the country, in New York City, Chicago, New Orleans, Galveston, and throughout the West, in California, Montana, and Alaska. It was the most influential pioneer Serbian publication in America.

Veljko Radojevich who became editor of Sloboda after his arrival from Europe in 1900, left in 1903 to publish his own paper Srpska Nezavisnost (Serbian Independence) in Oakland. Radojevich was born in the village of Podi near Herceg Novi, Boka Kotorska and began his journalistic career in his homeland in 1888. Throughout his career he was one of the most prolific writers among Serbs in America.³⁰

The Serbian Herald was first issued in 1908 under the direction of the Serbian Publishing Company. It later merged with the National Herald to become the Jugoslav American Herald in 1937. It remained the major Serbian and Yugoslav publication not only in the Bay Area, but in the entire western United States, until it was moved to Los Angeles after the death of its editor, Charles Cvetkovich in late 1963.

Many prominent members of the First Serbian Benevolent Society took part in the publication of the Herald (Glasnik), serving on its board of directors and editorial boards. Among the early editors of the Herald were such prominent names in Serbian-American journalism as Bozo Rankovich, Milan Jevtich, Ceda Pavich, Spiro Radoicich, and Ilija Balich.³¹

Numerous Serbian language publications appeared in the San Francisco Bay Area, although some of them had very brief lifespans. San Francisco was one of the major centers of Serbian publishing activity in America during the first decades of the twentieth century. The Bay Area attracted such distinguished Serbian-American literary figures as the young short story writer, Petar Luburich, whose portrayals of immigrant life have elements in common with the famous American novelist Jack London, and the highly respected poet, Proka Jovkich, who also wrote under the pseudonyms Srbin Slobodanovich, and Nestor Zhuchtny. Unfortunately, many of these young literary figures lost their lives in the Serbian struggle for freedom during World War I, thereby cutting short the development of some of the most promising literary trends among Serbs in America.³²

The Origins of the Serbian Orthodox Church in the United States

The San Francisco Bay Area can be rightly considered one of the first centers of Orthodox Christianity in the United States, and Serbs played a major role in its early development here.

The early Orthodox church parish in San Francisco was under Russian jurisdiction and was served primarily by Russian priests, yet was Pan-Orthodox in character consisting of Serbs, Greeks, Russians, Syrians, and other nationalities. The importance of the Serbian role is indicated in the following quote from a Russian Orthodox source:

Thus, few persons realize that the roots of Orthodoxy in America, with the exception of Alaska, lead directly to the holy places of Serbia. In 19th century San Francisco, which was the first center of Orthodoxy in the United States, although the clergy were mostly Russian, the faithful were almost exclusively Serbs from the Boka and Cherna Gora (Crna Gora) regions. Serbian saints were among the first to be invoked in America, their icons among the first to be invenerated, and their feast days among those celebrated with the greatest devotion. Consequently, it might be said that the Serbian saints became the 'spiritual ancestors' and patrons of

Orthodoxy in America, a connection with them and the holy places of Serbia being established through the pious Serbian pioneers in 19th century America, and above all in the person of the American-born apostle of Holy Orthodoxy in America, Archimandrite Sebastian Dabovich of Eternal Memory, whose ancestors came from near Herceg Novi, within the spiritual radius of the Savina Monastery.³³

⌈Father Dabovich, who was born in San Francisco in 1863, was the first American-born Orthodox priest. His parents, Ilija and Elena Dabovich, were among the earliest Serbian pioneers in California. They came to San Francisco in 1853 from the village of Sasovici near Herceg Novi, Boka Kotorska (Bay of Kotor). With two children, they crossed the Isthmus of Panama on donkeys.⌋

⌈Father Dabovich was responsible for laying the foundations of the Serbian Orthodox church in America with the building of the St. Sava Serbian Orthodox Church in 1894 in Jackson, Amador County, California. Here Father Dabovich, together with a number of Serbian gold miners from Amador County and surrounding counties of California's famous Mother Lode country, built the first Serbian Orthodox Church in America. It stands today an active parish as well as a historical shrine to all our Serbian pioneers. Serbs throughout the western United States donated for the building of the church in Jackson.⌋

Dabovich Family

Early celebration at St. Sava Serbian Orthodox Church, Jackson, California

In the Serbian-American newspaper, Sloboda, of San Francisco are found lists of donations for the St. Sava church from Serbs in such distant locales as Butte, Montana.³⁴ The church was consecrated by the Russian bishop of Alaska and the Aleutian Islands, Nicholas of San Francisco. Bishop Nicholas was an honorary member of the First Serbian Benevolent Society of San Francisco.

Very Rev. Archimandrite
Sebastian Dabovich

As we see, the earliest organized Serbian Orthodox Church life in America was closely connected to the Russian Orthodox Ecclesiastical Mission. Yet, it is interesting to note the arrival of a few individual Serbian Orthodox priests from Montenegro and Boka Kotorska as early as 1875 or 1876.

Father Dabovich tells us of a priest from Montenegro named Matanovich who served three liturgies in the Russian Orthodox Church in San Francisco in 1876, prior to returning to Cetinje due to his inability to receive permanent assignment in America.³⁵

We also have reference to the similar case of a priest from Boka Kotorska named Zec who arrived in America about the same time as Father Matanovich, and there is some indication that Serbs from Boka Kotorska living in New Orleans attempted to enlist a Serbian Orthodox priest from Boka to serve their religious needs as early as the 1870's.³⁶

Of these early Serbian Orthodox priests in America we know very little due to the scarcity of sources on their missions. Somewhat more is known of the activities of Father Dabovich and of Archimandrite Firmilian, who came from Serbia to serve the Serbs of Chicago in 1892. It was due primarily to their efforts and to the efforts of the priests who followed them that the Serbian Orthodox Church in America owes its beginnings.

The career of Father Dabovich was long and varied and would serve as a worthy subject for a Serbian-American biographical study. Receiving his theological training in Russia, Father Dabovich for a number of years served the Serbian community from the Russian Orthodox Church in San Francisco, and in 1905 was officially named head of the Serbian Orthodox Mission in the United States.

The early Russian Orthodox parish of San Francisco, which changed its name and location a number of times over the years, served the religious needs of Serbs spread throughout the Far West until the establishment of their own Serbian Orthodox parishes.³⁷

In Sloboda, the major San Francisco Serbian newspaper of the 1890's and early 1900's, one often finds mention of Serbian families from scattered western communities like Virginia City, Nevada, and Bisbee, Arizona, traveling to San Francisco where, at the Russian Orthodox Church, they baptized their children, married, and buried their dead.³⁸

By all accounts, the pioneer Serbs of San Francisco celebrated their Christmas, which falls on January 7th by the Julian calendar, in a very colorful manner. Services were held in the Russian Orthodox Church, attended by the local Russian and Greek consuls. Litanies were recited for the Czar of Russia, the kings of Serbia and Greece, and the Prince of Montenegro. After the services Serbs sang epic tales of their famous battle against the Turks at Kosovo, accompanied by the traditional one-stringed instrument, the gusle. Pistol shots were heard as Montenegrin and Hercegovinian Serbs fired into the air, as is their tradition on special occasions. One might have thought he was in Cetinje or Nevesinje.

Serbs visited from house to house-eating, drinking, singing, dancing, and toasting their heroes. They danced Serbian Kolos and Montenegrin Oros, and frequently non-Serbs took part in these spirited dances. The Serbian newspapers of San Francisco also noted that a number of the Serbs from Hercegovina gathered at the home of Stevo Gerunovich, a prominent member of the Serbian Society, to honor the newly-elected president of the Society, Petar Vukanovich.³⁹

[The impetus for the organization of the first Orthodox parish in San Francisco came from the Greek-Russian-Slavonian Orthodox Church and Benevolent Society, which was organized in 1864 with an initial membership of sixteen, twelve of whom were Serbs.

The best description of the founding of the Orthodox Society is in an article by Reverend Sebastian Dabovich, "The Orthodox Church in California," which was first published in the Russian Orthodox Messenger for 1897-1898. As an important document on the origins of the Serbian Orthodox Church in America, the section of the article relating to the Orthodox society is reprinted here as it first appeared in English translation in The First Serbian Pioneers in America and Their Activities in California and the South by Adam S. Eterovich on the occasion of the 125th anniversary of the birth of Mihailo Pupin, 1979.

The Orthodox Church in California,
By Sebastian Dabovich

Russian Orthodox Messenger

The sounds of the Orthodox prayer were heard in California for the first time at Fort Ross, the fortified settlement of Russians residing here for trading relations with the California Spaniards, and for protecting the sea fisheries of the Russo-American Trading Company of Alaska. In the small bay of Bodega fifty miles north of San Francisco were stationed the sailing schooners of the Russians, and the leather boats of the Aleutians. Not far from the bay on a hillside was Fort Ross, inside of which one could see a chapel where the Russians sang their hymns and prayers together with the baptized Aleutians and California Indians. The first Christians among the Indians were probably converted by ordinary citizens whereas the next converts were probably baptized by the clergy, coming here from Sitka to perform services and do church work. Among the missionaries was the famous Father John Veniaminov from Sitka. In 1884, the author of this manuscript saw in the settlement of New Archangel, (in the dialect called Sitka), on Baranov Island the children from marriages between the Russians and California Indians.

Thus Russia or the Russo-American Company, had possessions in California since 1806. Fort Ross was christened in 1812. The larger part of the population of these possessions formed the first Orthodox community in California. On holidays all the people gathered for mass prayer in the chapel, the ruins of which can be seen today. The river flowing through this region of tall and graceful Redwood trees preserved to this day the name Russian, as well as one of the hills in San Francisco. From 1840 all this territory of hilly California was transferred to the Americans. From that moment Captain John Sutter raised the American flag on the former Russian fortress of Sonoma County died the sounds of "Gospodi pomilui" (God have mercy on us), sung by the Orthodox Christians. The place became deserted and it seemed as though the Orthodox Christian faith had bid goodbye forever to this region.

The Formation of the Orthodox Society in San Francisco and the visit of the Russian Fleet.

After such an ending to the Russian colony in California it was hard to imagine that the time would ever come that Orthodox Christianity would shine here again, but with God's will this has come to pass. Discovery of gold attracted here masses of people not only from far away states of America, but also from Europe. Among these fortune seekers in the New World there were Orthodox Serbs and Greeks. They began to appear in the early fifties. In 1857 you could see in San Francisco Bay for the first time since the surrender of Fort Ross appeared a Russian Naval Vessel. (They came for the protection of the Federal Government.) On their ship was stationed, attached to the Second Amur Squadron, Archpriest Cyril. He went ashore in the same year, and in the house of Mr. Kostromitinov baptized several Russian and Serbian children. This was the first public church service in California after the closing of Fort Ross. Then in 1862, to the shore of San Francisco was moored the Russian naval vessel "Kalevala". On this ship was Archpriest Vitaly from Konev Monastery. He also performed the sacraments of the Holy Communion and blessings in San Francisco. In 1863 during the entire year of Civil War in San Francisco Bay were stationed six naval vessels under the command of the Russian Admiral Popov. Among these were the corvettes, the Mighty, Riga and Kalevala. On the flagship the Mighty was the resident Archpriest Cyril from St. Tichon First Class Monastery. In 1863 he christened several children in San Francisco, and among them the author of this manuscript. According to the testimony of the local press, the Confederate ship "Alabama" when it learned of the presence of the Russian vessels did not risk entering San Francisco Bay.

On Easter night 1864, at the invitation of the Admiral, together with Mr.

Kostromitinov and the Serbs-Nikola Dabovich, Peter Radovich, and Andreja Chelovich-Holy Liturgy was celebrated. It is not known who suggested the establishment of an Orthodox Society in San Francisco, but it is believed that the initiative belonged to Admiral Popov, because he was present at the first meeting of the society, and before the opening of the first church service was conducted. Father Cyril, who conducted the service, was a middle aged man and of pleasant appearance. He wore the Synodal cross, an indication of his status.

The newly formed society had towards the end of 1864 had a deposit with the San Francisco Savings and Union Bank of $124.38. The first members of this society were: Nikola Dabovich, Peter Radovich, George Lazarevich, Nikola Gregovich, Bogdan Matkovich, Andreja Chelovich, Peter Bokanovich, Peter Zenovich, Ivan Constantine, Michael Heriasis, Luka Balich, Ilija Vujovich, Gavrilo Kustudija, Constantin Milinovich, and Ivan Herzo a Roman Catholic. Everyone of these people invested $20 in gold.

Finally the Russian ships departed. There were no more priests. It would seem that without a church and priest this society was destined to disappear from the face of the earth. However, with God's mercy this did not happen. The Orthodox Serbs, Greeks and Russians lived then in friendship and supported each other like brothers. They could gather on the big holidays in the homes of those with families and sing church and folk songs. In those days a candle and bread was always available to those who had a Krsna Slava (Serbian Patron Saint Thanksgiving in the family or generation, to commemorate the receiving of a Christian faith in place of a pagan one.)

This modest society began to communicate with the Old Country, for the purpose of acquiring a priest. Thus time passed until 1867 when finally appeared the unknown Honcharenko, posing as a priest. At that time in San Francisco the Russian consul was Martin Klinkovstrem (a Russian Finn), a religious man and strict disciplinarian. He with the majority of the Orthodox population began to suspect that Honcharenko was a fraud. They began to make inquiries, and it was disclosed that Honcharenko was indeed an imposter. This Honcharenko was only a monk from Kiev-Pecher Monastery with the rank of only a deacon. He was sent to serve at the legation church in Athens. For his political activities, he was deprived of this position, but he did not return to Russia, as he was instructed to. Subsequently he lived in London and then showed up in San Francisco, having married in the meantime. Here he managed to baptize a son of Lazarevich a Serb, before he was exposed. The brother of this Honcharenko then lived on Mount Athos. A former monk from Alexandro-Nevsky Monastery, Father Martirii served with him in Athens. A monk from the Alaskan Diocese knew Honcharenko in Kiev. This episode with Honcharenko forced the society to think more seriously about its spiritual existence. Under the guidance of the Russian Consul Klinkovstrem, the society was legally established. The Constitution was written up in the true spirit of the church, and registered formally at the City Hall in December 1867. Among the new members were: Ivan Franetta, Carl Baum, Archimandritov, Ilija Chelovich, Sava Martinovich, A. Chausov, George Fisher, Lazar Jovovich, and Luka Jankovich. The Russian representative delegated to supervise the transfer of Alaska to the Federal Government, Aleksii Peschurov, joined the society and paid his dues for several months in advance. In those days in California money was cheap. The area was not yet overpopulated. Monopolies had not yet been formed. Labor was highly paid. There was no cheap labor of the Italians, and especially the Chinese. The members with few exceptions donated generously for the common good. The administrator of the Russian colonies in America, Prince Makaitov, promised the brotherhood, to assist in arranging that the Russian Bishop in Sitka assign a Russian priest for the parish. He also donated $200 to the society. And in the following year, 1868, arrived in San Francisco from Sitka a Russian Priest, Nicolai Kovigin, accompanied by a deacon, Vassily Shishkin. Liturgy was conducted in the home of a Serb, Peter Sekulovich, at 3241 Mission Street near 28th. In those days the location was considered a suburb. I remember the first church service to which I went with my mother. It was a long walk down the dirt roads. It was raining mercilessly. We had to cross a board thrown across a ravine and finally we reached a small church house. Actually it was a divided room converted into a church. In one corner there was a small table in place of an altar of offerings. There were two icons on the walls, one of Christ and another Saint Mary. This ceremony was attended by twenty people. When time came to go to the cup of Holy Communion, my elder brother went with the Father but I was not allowed to go, being a small child. This has to be explained. The Western Serbs, Dalmatians and others do not admit their small children to the Holy Communion. The clergy in some places cannot to this day restore the Orthodox practice of admitting children. The priest, Kovrigin, had to go to Sitka in that same summer, but returned in early 1869. This time he brought his family with him to remain as our priest permanently. The parishioners placed him in a spacious house with new furniture on Greenwich Street #516. In the hall of this house was established a temporary church, without an altar. I remember this home/church, where I for the first time had a confession and took the sacraments. During the service the three grown-up daughters of the consul Klinkovstrom (Orthodox like their mother) were gracefully singing church hymns. The psalm-reader was a Serb Joakim Chuda to whom the parish was paying $50 a month. Besides the rental for the house of the priest, the parish was also paying for the upkeep of the church and the priest. Thus existed the Orthodox Society in San Francisco until 1871. That year arrived from Sitka to reside here the first Aleuto-Alaskan Archbishop with his staff and thus San Francisco became an Episcopal city of the Bishop of Aleuto-Alaska.

For many years the Orthodox Society administered an Orthodox cemetery in San Francisco. Here Serbian pioneers from all over the West were buried; yet, by the 1890's, the Orthodox Society was on the decline and it appears that many of their activities had been taken over by the Serbian Society. Facing severe financial difficulties, they were forced to secure a loan from the Serbian Society. Due to their inability to repay this loan, they had to forfeit to the Serbian Society a property at Turk Street and Parker Avenue in San Francisco. This property was used as an Orthodox cemetery until new restrictions in the city ordinance prohibiting burials within the city required the Society to move the remains to the Serbian Cemetery in Colma, San Mateo County, where the first plot of land was purchased in 1900.

The San Francisco Business Directory of 1895 records the Greek-Russian-Slavonic Orthodox Church and Benevolent Society as having 350 members. Soon afterward, though, this Society ceased to exist.

Many of the most prominent members and officers of the Serbian Society had been active members of the Orthodox Society. The meetings of the Orthodox Society were held at the Russian Church and at the Serbian-Montenegrin Society Hall, which at the time was located at 10 California Street.

Following the demise of the Orthodox Society, the Serbs of San Francisco made several attempts to build or buy a separate Serbian Orthodox Church and to secure the services of a permanent priest of Serbian nationality. The First Serbian Benevolent

Society was frequently in the forefront of these efforts and they were eventually to prove successful.⁴⁰

From its humble beginnings, including its involvement with the early Orthodox Society and Russian parish in San Francisco, and with the activities of Father Dabovich and the building of the small, yet stately, St. Sava Church in Jackson, the Serbian Orthodox Church in California has grown to comprise numerous church parishes, some of them quite wealthy, with impressive edifices built in the Serbo-Byzantine architectural style, including spacious social halls and grounds. From a handful of Serbian pioneers, who organized the early Orthodox Society, and small group of Serbian gold miners who built the St. Sava Church in Jackson, the Serbian Orthodox Church in America has grown to include thousands of Serb-Americans as its parishioners, spread throughout the United States and Canada.

The Founding of the First Serbian Benevolent Society of San Francisco

Our immortal author and philosopher, Petar Petrovich-Njegosh, in the Forties of the past century was returning from Rome to Cetinje. His itinerary took him through northern Italy, which was held at the time by Austria. An Austrian officer, a Serbian from Vojvodina, heard that the great Serbian author, bishop and prince of the one-free Serbian land, was in the vicinity and applied for an audience. The Bishop received him. The man from Vojvodina shed tears of joy and was asked by the Bishop: "Is there anything you wish me to do for you?" "No, Your Eminence, there is nothing I wished except to see the ruler of one free Serbian state. Here I, too, am a Serbian, but I must serve as a foreign ruler. It is five years since I have seen my home and I am waning because of my great desire to visit there." "My friend, thus it is," replied the Bishop, adding: "We Serbians, unfortunate that we are, have no home. We lost it at Kosovo, and now we must wander throughout the world."

This true incident took place on the threshold of the Serbian homeland. Our great author was touched when he saw a Serbian in the service of a foreign land. And this incident comes to our mind when a great Serbian Society celebrates its 100th anniversary on the edge of the world, in the city by the Golden Gate of the Pacific Ocean. We are reminded of the difficulties that our suffering people experienced from the fall of the medieval Serbian State at Kosovo to the present day. And also of the misery which forced them to leave the home ground, the beautiful land beside the Adriatic.

The heavy foreign yoke, poverty and affliction, forced the Serbian people to scatter over the world and come to the farthest reaches of the Earth, that they might find succor for themselves and their families in the homeland, and in these lands they made their new homes. And now we celebrate a rare occasion, in a land cultured and prosperous - the United States of America.

Among our organizations, which did all they could for our race and our new, free, and independent country, the First Serbian Benevolent Society holds one of the brightest positions.

This is the first Serbian Society in the United States to celebrate its centennial, an occasion about which few societies could boast in the homeland where our ancestors settled over twelve centuries ago. The history of the Society is filled with beautiful and bright moments, and we will note more fully some of the accomplishments of the early years, accomplishments which remind us of the past of the immigrant and his difficult struggle for survival and for our common cause.

The founding of the First Serbian Benevolent Society in San Francisco begins with the early days, when small groups of Serbians began to trek to the shores of the Pacific, which became famous for the gold and silver discoveries in California and Nevada. Small settlements of Serbs were formed in the 1850's and 1860's, of which San Francisco was the most important. When the early Slavonic organizations were formed, our workers joined them. The first of these organizations was the Slavonic Illyric Mutual and Benevolent Society organized in San Francisco in 1857. This is the oldest South Slavic organization in America and is still in existence today as the Slavonic Mutual and Benevolent Society. So that they might better express their Serbianism and help one another, a group of six men met in April 1880 in San Francisco to agree upon organizing a Serbian society. Thus, on May 2, 1880, the participants in the first gathering, augmented by two more supporters, laid the foundation for the first Serbian institution in America. The society's name was the Serbian Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society.

Giving it this name prevented the enemies of Serbian unity from establishing another society under the Montenegrin name. The participants bound themselves on their honor to support the Society in case of necessity and in every way to make secure its moral and financial progress. Into the statutes was written that the objects of this Society are: "The promotion of social and intellectual intercourse among its members, and the establishment of a system of general philanthropy and benevolence by providing for the sick and distressed."

And as it was agreed so was it done. They immediately contacted patriotic publications, organizations, and individuals in the homeland. The Minister of Education in Serbia was contacted, and he replied soon afterward, as did other patriots, with gifts of books and papers. Many newspapers and journals in the homeland sent publications, which they continued to do for many years.

In January 1881, the Society voted that no member could receive any benefits until it had a treasury of one thousand dollars. The Society ended its first year of work with 26 members and $55.00 capital.

At the same time the Society decided to celebrate the Day of St. Sava, the first Serbian enlightener and teacher and the saint most venerated by the Serbian Orthodox Church and the Serbian people. To this first celebration of St. Sava in America the Russian Bishop of San Francisco sent an archimandrite, a priest, and two cantors to represent him. The First Serbian Benevolent Society continued to celebrate St. Sava's Day until 1945, when it turned the celebration of this holiday over to the Serbian Orthodox parishes of San Francisco and Oakland.

Thus, the Serbian Society became the center of the Slavic community on the West Coast. For this reason the Society added to its statutes that any Slav of good character could become a member. At the same meeting, held May 16, 1881, the Society ordered that the meeting room be decorated for forty days in memory of the death of the Russian Czar, Alexander II. It was also ordered that a copy of the Society's by-laws be sent to the Serbian-Montenegrin Society being formed in Chicago (today's Serbian Society "Unity" of Chicago).

On June 13, 1882, the Society was recognized by the State authorities and incorporated, and for the first time the by-laws were published. It is interesting to note that these first by-laws were printed in Novi Sad. By October 4, 1882, the Society had its official diplomas published. The first diplomas were sent to King Milan I, of Serbia, and Prince Nicholas I, of Montenegro, and the heir to the thrones of these two Serbian States. In December 1882 diplomas were also sent to Ivan Sergevich Aksakov, Chairman of the Moscow Slav Committee, and Mihail Grigorevich Cherniaev, a prominent Russian General who had commanded part of the Serbian Army in the war against the Turks in 1876. Both men were known to be great friends of the Serbs and pan-Slavs. It is interesting to note that all of these notable personages accepted with gratitude the diplomas and their honorary membership in the first Serbian society in America.

The beginning was difficult, as most beginnings are; yet, the sturdy Serbian pioneers struggled and made sacrifices for the good of the Society. Membership drives took place with awards to those members who brought in the most applicants or contributed in other ways to promote the success of the picnics and dances. Fines were imposed on the slightest infraction of parliamentary protocol and on nonattendance at meetings and funerals.

In spite of the difficulties faced by the founders of the Society, they were able to establish direct ties with the Serbian government, Serbian kings, princes, poets, writers, and other patriots, and with patriotic organizations and publications. As early as the 1880's, frequent references to the activities of the San Francisco society could be found in Serbian publications in Belgrade, Cetinje, Zagreb, Novi Sad, Zadar, Vienna, and Constantinople (Istanbul)!

The Society collected many Serbian books and newspapers and established a reading room and library out of which the first Serbian newspapers to be published in America originated. Members were assisted in learning the English language and the Society cared for the spiritual and educational as well as material well-being of its members.

The Society helped fellow Slavs in distress, cared for the sick, and buried the dead. In many cases in which a member was found to be suffering from an incurable disease, the Society would provide for his return to his native land and make adequate provision for his permanent support. In every respect the Society was generous in helping not only its members but other Slavs in need.

In 1884, the decision was made to publish for the first time the Society's By-Laws in the English language.

In 1885, Sava Bjelanovic, newspaper editor and leader of the Serbs in Dalmatia was elected an honorary member of the Society.

In May of 1886 the Society held its first picnic in Belmont. This was the first time that the Society made its appearance before the American public, and they did so with great style, marching through the streets of San Francisco behind the Serbian flag, to the music of sixteen Serbian musicians.

The Society's picnics became one of its most successful activities and received attention not only in the local Serbian press such as Sloboda (July 14, 1894), but also in San Francisco newspapers. For example in the Call of July 12, 1896 we find the following article:

Serbians to Celebrate With The Montenegrins They Will Devote a Day to Pleasure A Parade in This City and a Picnic At San Rafael With Many Prizes

Next Sunday the several hundred residents of this city who are representatives of the little European country Serbia-Montenegro will assemble at California Schuetzen Park, San Rafael, renew patriotic thoughts and have a whole day of sport with their friends.

The celebration will begin with a parade up California Street, along Kearny and down Market to the Tiburon Ferry, the members of the Society to start for the picnic grounds on the 9:30 boat. In the parade there are to be a number of stalwart men in picturesque Montenegrin costume, and several little girls and boys dressed as their mothers and fathers may have been on a fete day in their native land. But on the other side of the bay the formality of a parade will be forgotten in a general happy-go-lucky good-time, to conclude at 5 o'clock with the distribution of 130 prizes, varying from cash in golden eagles down to an alarm clock. Wines, beer, cigars, and things make up the great body of the prizes.

The Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society was organized sixteen years ago and has at present 225 members in this city ...”

This article goes on to list the officers of the Society, and describes their preparations to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the rule of the Petrovich-Njegosh dynasty in Montenegro.

First Serbian Benevolent Society Picnic in Cupertino, California, 1926.

The year of 1890 was marked by the election of the first Roman Catholic President, Mr. Kazimir Antonioli. This was to occur a number of times in ensuing years, the Society's members following the dictum, "Brat je mio koje vjere bio" (A brother is dear whatever his faith).

The Society grew from an initial membership of 8, May of 1880, to 126 members in good standing by the end of 1890. In its first two decades of existence the membership grew steadily, yet the first major increase in membership took place in the years 1903 and 1904 when 117 members joined the Society. When it celebrated its 25th anniversary in 1905, the Serbian Society had a membership of 304.

Members of FSBS 1880-1920

In 1890, the first Annual Ball was held. Yet, as regards the Society's celebrations, St. Sava's Day was traditionally one of the most important annual events, as is evidenced from the Society's minutes, and contemporary newspaper accounts. The St. Sava dinners were well attended, and were characterized by the singing of Serbian songs, giving of Serbian toasts, dancing Bokelian and Montenegrin style, and listening to epic songs, sung to the accompaniment of the Serbian gusle.

The Serbian patriotic and pan-Slavic views of the Society's members were manifested in a number of ways. In the Society's hall, along with the Society's banner, and the Serbian and American flags; hung portraits of the King of Serbia, Prince of Montenegro, Czar of Russia, and the founding father of the United States, George Washington. Among these portraits was a painting of Petar Petrovich Njegosh, the esteemed Serbian poet, Montenegrin ruler, and Bishop of the Church. This painting had been done by Velimir Chelovich, a Serb who edited the first Italian newspaper in San Francisco. In a place of honor would also be displayed a gusle, the one stringed musical instrument, by which the Serbs sang of and preserved their history through many years of foreign domination. Much care was also taken in the maintenance of a Serbian library, and the receipt of books as gifts was considered a major event. The members were also extremely proud to display and wear the colorful Montenegrin attire.

The patriotic position taken by the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society, as it was then known, reflected the yearnings for independence of the Serbian people, many of whom were still living under foreign (Habsburg and Ottoman) rule. Orthodox Russia was considered a friend and defender of the Serbian people, the Austro-Hungarian empire, an enemy. It is interesting to note that while 90 percent of the Society's members came from regions that were at the time under Austro-Hungarian control, primarily from Boka Kotorska and Hercegovina, they declined an invitation to take part in the 50th anniversary of the rule of Franz Joseph, ignoring the warnings of the local Austro-Hungarian consul that they were required to do so as subjects of Franz Joseph. Yet, when Czarevich Nicholas, later to become Czar Nicholas II of Russia, was planning a trip to San Francisco in 1891, the Society initiated preparations to welcome him as an important and honored guest. The Society also refused to take part in a Slavonic Day parade in 1894, due to the failure of the parade's organizers to include a Russian delegation in this supposedly all-Slavic event.

In 1897, when a flood ravaged sections of Serbia, Montenegro, Boka Kotorska, and Bosnia and Hercegovina, the Society established a tradition of relief to its brothers in need in the homeland which it follows to this day. As expressions of gratitude for the Society's aid, letters were sent to the Society by the hierarchs of the Serbian Orthodox Churches in Serbia and Montenegro, Metropolitans Mihailo and Mitrophan Ban. These letters have been preserved in the Society's archives.

The choice of the Society's honorary members also indicates the extent of their patriotic and pan-Slavic point of view. Along with the rulers of Serbia and Montenegro, the Russian pan-Slavs, Aksakov and Cherniaev, and the Dalmatian-Serb leader, Bjelanovic, elected as honorary members were the Bishop of the Russian Orthodox Church in San Francisco, His Grace Bishop Nicholas of Alaska and the Aleutian Islands, and the distinguished Serbian and pan-Slav poet Jovan Sundeichich. In the correspondence between the Society and Jovan Sundeichich, this worthy poet dedicated a poem in honor of the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society, which is reprinted in full in the appendix of this volume.

This Society also bestowed Diplomas of honorary membership on two prominent Serb-Americans, Vladimir P. Popovich, and John Gregovich. Vladimir Popovich was a distinguished member of the Serbian Society and the San Francisco Serbian community. He was honored for his many contributions to the Society's welfare. A native of Boka Kotorska, he was frequently elected an officer of the Society, and served as its President in the years 1913 and 1914. He was active in local Serbian literary affairs, and he wrote the first history of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, Zivot i Rad Srpsko-Crnogorskog Literarnog and Dobrtvornog Drustva u San Fanciscku, (Life and Work of the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society in San Francisco), Oakland, California, 1905.

John Gregovich was a Nevada State Senator at the time of his election to honorary membership in the First Serbian Benevolent Society in 1895. He was the first known South Slav in America to serve in a state legislature. Gregovich was a native of Petrovac na Moru, Boka Kotorska (Pastrovici). He was a true western pioneer, arriving in the 1870's, and coming west by way of the Isthmus of Panama. During his visit to San Francisco in March of 1895 he was welcomed by the Serbian Society, and elected to honorary membership. A banquet was prepared in his honor at a restaurant owned by two of the Society's members, Gudelj and Mitrovich.

Ima već nekoliko dana da se nalazi u ovom gradu sa svojom suprugom, četkom i sestrom, Srbin gosp. Jovo Gregović, Senator iz Dravje Novake.

Jovo Gregović, Senator u Dravji Novadi

Ovaj nas čini Srbin, a kome je „Sloboda“ već jednom javila, došao je u našu sredinu zbog svojih poslova, a najpre da poslovi svoje stare prijateljice i braće Srba, jer sve je poslova punih dravski i sa srpskim, od kad je posljednjom volje ovaj grad. Tako je u prošlu stiglo u našu sredinu „Srpskog Crnogorskog Društva“ upravo kad braća na okupu bijahu. — Društvo su ga predstavili, kao bivši tajnik gosp. Vladimira Jovčića i gosp. Luka Vuketić, izvanprijatelji, i najpre vidjeti ga u našoj sredini i vreme poznati braćima. Predsjednik gosp. Petar L. Vukanić čestitajući gospodinu Gregoviću na njegovom uspjehu posljednjem uspjehu, i zahvaljujući svemu, koji se sprema bio jednako ovaj Srpski Dom, da i bare da dijelom sretno bude i na kraju sveta i svoprost!

Iza toga slijedilo je nekoliko govora od strane „Srpskog Crnogorskog Društva“ na zahvaljujući svim prilikama kojih bješe velika broj. Na istom sastanku „Srpskog Crnogorskog Društva“, na predlog gosp. Špeta Hladuša, izabran gosp. Gregović za počasnog člana, i za spomen Društva diploma bješe mu predana. Gosp. Gregović ovaj postupak od strane svoje braće tako je gnušao, da je odmah poslao govor zahvaljujući braći na pozivu!

Danas čuo smo i sliku gosp. Gregovića, neka ga vide svi, koji nijesu imali priliku vidjeti ga. Zbog nam ovako, „Sloboda“ kaže, i molimo se na koncu svoga i svojih, kizaju na na sliku i govore Srbinu u u svjetlo slavlno i na blagovoljenoj zemlji!

The Society in other ways gained recognition in the broader American community. In 1894, the Society answered an inquiry from Stanford University, as to the work of the organization, the donations that it made to various charities and other details of the life of Serbs in America and the homeland.

The Society and the Serbs of San Francisco received a great deal of praise for their participation in the July 4th parade which took place in Golden Gate Park in 1894. The Serbian representation was described as one of the most colorful and the Serbian float the best decorated. Over fifty American cultural and civic as well as military and literary groups took part in this parade. The Morning Call of July 5, 1894 describes the parade in the following manner:

The Serbian division was one of the best ever seen of any foreign society. They were led by Marshall Petar Popovich, and Aids M. Tripovich and John Glavinovich, with several mounted Montenegrins in their national costumes. The float was one of the finest ever seen in any parade. It contained the American Goddess of Liberty and that of Servia, with sixteen Servian young girls representing sixteen Servian states. Misses Mabel Mitrovich and Ella Dabovich were the goddesses. The carriage of Sloboda a Servian paper was prettily decorated. The Servians held patriotic speeches honoring the independence of their adopted country.

The minutes of the Society add that the float was composed of two mountains representing Lovchen and Avala, that the two women holding shields represented Serbia and Montenegro, and that there were eighteen girls dressed in white with ribbons on their shoulders upon which were written the Serbian districts they represented.

John Glavinovich, a native of Amador County, became the Society's first American-born President in 1897. It is interesting to note the presence of American members born of the Society in its formative years, for example Ilija Jovanovich, born in Virginia City, Nevada, joined the Society in 1885. This indicates that the first generation of American-born Serbs were born at least as early as the 1860's.

Thusly, the First Serbian Benevolent Society, then known as the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society, grew in size, expanded its activities, established contacts with the homeland, and became increasingly a part of the San Francisco and broader American community. As the first Serbian organization in America, it set an example that any organization that came afterward could be proud to follow.

Second Meeting

San Francisco, May 2, 1880

Attending:

M. Rashkovich
A. Vukasovich
G. Martinovich
J. Jovovich
J. Pavkovich
K. Gopceovich
V. Jovovich
R. Begovich

In a somewhat lengthy speech Mr. Rashkovich explained the reason for the meeting and suggested that the president and other officers of the Society be elected. Suggestion was unanimously accepted. On his motion the majority of votes elected Mr. A. Vukasovich for the president.

The president took his chair and proposed the following gentlemen for officers of the Society:

Vice President: M. Rashkovich
Secretary: G.S. Martinovich
Treasurer: Jovo Jovovich
Board: V. Jovovich, Jovo Pavkovich, K.
Gopceovich, R. Begovich

all were unanimously elected.

The recommendation made by G. Martinovich that a Committee be appointed to draft Society's by-laws, rules and regulations was unanimously accepted and necessary work assigned to Mr. Rashkovich. In a lengthy statement Mr. Rashkovich proposed that in accordance with the urgent need and requirements of the time a Library be established in San Francisco. The proposal was accepted and for the manager of the same Mr. Rashkovich was unanimously elected.

It was agreed that the formation of the Library be announced in the following Serbian newspapers: Srpska Zora, Vienna, Austria, Istok, Belgrade, Serbia, Glas Crnogoraca, Cetinje, Montenegro, with the appeal to these newspapers and reading Serbian public for every possible assistance to the Library. Likewise, it was decided to send a petition to the Ministry of Education and Church Affairs in Beograd to send to the Library out of Serbian Government's Library some educational material.

Unanimously resolved that until the end of May 1881 those wishing to become members of the Society will pay, in addition to one dollar monthly dues an admission fee of 5 dollars if up to 30 years of age, 10 dollars if 30 to 40 years of age, 15 dollars if 40 to 50 years of age. For those over 50 years old the Society will decide.

A meeting was scheduled for next Friday.

The Growth of the Society to World War II

In the first quarter of its existence, the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society, as it was then known, grew from its initial and founding members to 304 members in good standing, at the time of the Society's 25th Anniversary celebration in 1905.

The years, 1903-1912, witnessed the greatest increase in Serbian immigration to America. In the years 1903 and 1904 alone, 117 new members joined the Society.

The largest single increase in membership took place in 1909. At this time, the Serbian Benevolent Society Zmaj (named for the Serbian poet Zmaj Jovan Jovanovich) merged with the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society. On a single day, December 15, 1909, the Society's membership was increased by almost 200. The San Francisco Call reported the event in its December 22, 1909 edition in the following manner.

"200 Join Serbian-Montenegrin Society Members of Zmaj Unite With Larger Organization

Two hundred members of the Serbian Benevolent Society Zmaj united with the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society at the recent annual meeting of the latter organization, being received into membership by president John Shero-vich of the Literary and Benevolent Society.

The Serbian-Montenegrin Literary

and Benevolent Society now numbers 600 members. It maintains its own cemetery at Colma, has a fund to provide for aged members, widows and orphans, and is now raising money to build a $100,000 headquarters ...⁴¹

The Serbian Benevolent Society Zmaj had been organized in San Francisco in 1904 as a branch of the Serbian Benevolent Society of Angels Camp, California, and a member of the Serbian Fraternal Benevolent Federation of Chicago, (Prvi Srpski Bratski Dobrotvorni Savez). This Federation broke apart in 1909 with part of the Federation's lodges joining the newly formed Serbian Federation "Sloga" (Unity). A number of of the members of the Serbian Benevolent Society Zmaj had also been members of the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society prior to the merger of the two societies. It appears though, that many of them had arrived in San Francisco in the years between 1904 and 1909, either directly from Europe or from various western mining camps. At the outset of the First World War, the San Francisco Examiner estimated that there were 5,000 Serbs in the Bay cities.⁴² The Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society had over 600 members at this time.

During the period of the Balkan Wars and World War I, many of the Society's members traveled to Europe as volunteers for the Serbian and Montenegrin Armies and a significant number of them did not return to America.

The Montenegrins, under Prince Nikola reach the Adriatic after their victory against the Turks in the War of 1876-1878. The famous Serbian writer, Ljubomir Nenadovich, wrote about meeting two Montenegrin volunteers who traveled from California to take part in this struggle. See Ljubomir P. Nenadovic, O Crnogorcima Belgrade, 1929, p. 88.

The years between the First and Second World Wars did not see an appreciable increase in the size of the Serbian community in the Bay Area, largely due to the American Government's institution of a quota system on immigration.

The First Serbian Benevolent Society, as the Society was now named, had always drawn its membership from Serbs in various parts of the Western United States. Even in the Society's early years, when transportation was slow and difficult, members were found to reside in towns as far from San Francisco as Virginia City, Nevada, Tombstone, Arizona, and Butte, Montana. In later years the Society established Area Representatives in numerous towns, not only throughout the Western United States, but in Canada and Yugoslavia!

Shortly after the celebration of the Society's 50th Anniversary, in 1930, the Serbian Benevolent Society in Angels Camp, California dissolved its corporation and was accepted into membership in the First Serbian Benevolent Society.

The Serbian Benevolent Society in Angels Camp had been organized in 1893, incorporated in 1903. As has been mentioned, it was for a time a member of the short-lived "Chicago Federation". In the early 1900's there had been hundreds of Serbian gold-miners in Angels Camp and the surrounding towns of Calaveras County. In 1910 they built a small Serbian Orthodox Church, dedicated to St. Basil of Ostrog, (one of the most venerated Saints among Montenegrin and Hercegovinian Serbs).⁴³

At the time of the Balkan Wars and World War I many of the young Serbian miners left California's Mother Lode Country to fight on the European fronts. Later on, many Serbs moved from the mining districts to other parts of California. By 1930, there were relatively few Serbian families in Angels Camp. At the end of this year, the 39 remaining members of the Angels Camp Society were accepted into the membership of the First Serbian Benevolent Society.

Speech given by Ilija T. Balich, then President of the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society on the occasion of its 25th Anniversary, May 2, 1905.

Ladies and Gentlemen: My dear brothers and beloved sisters! My heart dances and it seems to me that from sheer joy it wants to jump out of this weak breast when I look about and see such a beautiful bouquet of the select flower of our Serbian colony gathered here this evening in this decorated hall, that together, in brotherly love, as is proper for the Serbs that we celebrate a great day, a day of happiness and rejoicing—a day of great pride. This is a day full of joy and pride, not only for us gathered here, but for all the Serbians in America, for this is the day we celebrate the Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the First Serbian organization in North America, that is our beloved Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society. Twenty five years have passed since those first eight

Serbian patriots gathered and laid the foundation of the first Serbian cultural organization in this foreign land and thusly, spread the Serbian symbol, the Serbian tri-color, that it might proudly wave on the shores of the Pacific Ocean, and that under it might be gathered all of Serbdom emigrating from the old homeland.

Over all this new free homeland of ours, we see Serbs organizing and following our founders' footsteps, for the progress of our people. God grant that in the near future we will all form one mighty entity, moving in concert for the honor and progress of Serbdom and the Serbian name!

And now ladies and gentlemen, with the help of God and with your permission, I open this celebration greeting you on this happy day, and to the founders I say, "Thank you and eternal memory'."

Activities of the Society During the Balkan Wars and World War I

On the eve of the famous San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906, the local Serbian newspaper Sloboda reported that "There were 2,000 Serbs in the city of San Francisco, mostly natives of Boka Kotorska and Hercegovina."

The earthquake put a temporary stop to the business of the then Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society and ended a page in the history of Serbian journalism in San Francisco with the destruction of Sloboda's offices and press.

Immediately after the earthquake the Society formed a special committee to investigate the whereabouts and condition of the Society's members and other San Francisco Serbs and to offer any necessary aid. Donations were received from Serbs living in neighboring western communities.

The San Francisco Serbian community had been somewhat dispersed by the earthquake, yet in the years following it, they rebuilt old and established new institutions and entered one of the most important eras in its history, culminating in the struggle of the Serbian people in Europe for freedom and unification during the Balkan Wars and World War I.

In 1907 the Society formed a committee to work together with the local Serbian Club to form a Serbian National Fund in San Francisco. The Society donated the proceeds of its St. Sava Day dinner this year for the establishment of the Serbian National Fund.

The Serbian National Fund was sponsored by a number of Serbian organizations, including the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society, the Serbian Club, and the Serbian Benevolent Society "Zmaj". Its purpose was to open schools and libraries and support poorer Serbs in many regions of the Serbian homeland, and to become the central patriotic, cultural, and educational institution for Serbs in America. It devoted some thousands of dollars to the Circle of Serbian Sisters in Belgrade, Serbian Schools in Macedonia, the Privrednik Society in Zagreb, Prosveta in Sarajevo, Zora in Dubrovnik and the Serbian National Defense in Belgrade. It sponsored the publication of the Serbian Herald in San Francisco. When the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary & Benevolent Society formed a Serbian Relief Society during World War I, the Serbian National Fund disbanded, turning its assets over to the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society and its library over to the Serbian Club, which then existed as the Serbian Soko Organization.

When the armies of Serbian and Montenegro went to war with the Turks at the time of the first Balkan War in 1912, Serbian men and women some of whom had spent 20, 30 and more years in America and some who were born here, formed committees, organized meetings and speeches, organized a National Defense, relief for widows and orphans and formed a volunteer unit of young Serbs to travel to the Balkan battlefields. At the outset of the struggle, the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society alone donated $5,000.00 and was responsible for gaining sympathy for the Serbian cause from many American individuals, publications and organizations. The Society bade farewell to a group of 117 volunteers and gave them the Serbian and American flags that the Society had purchased in 1884. This flag was later placed by the Montenegrin Government in the state arsenal at Cetinje.

In the Society's minutes are recorded the names of the Society members that went as volunteers into the Balkan War:

Steve Braticevich	Ilija Ljubibratic
George Jankovich	Spiro Miljanovich
Bozidar Lazarevich	Trifko Nozica
Jovan A. Lucich	Spiro Radojcich
Stevan Medenica	Vaso Rajkovich
Blazo Radonjich	Jovo Sulaver
George Sisovich	Ilija Vujanovich
Mitar Vujanovich	Ivo Vrbica
Filip Vukmanovich	Jovo Kovacina

The San Francisco Call published a front page article on the departure of the volunteers with a photo of some of the volunteers and the local Russian Orthodox priest who blessed their journey, which we reprint here:

Serbian Volunteers for the Balkan War from San Francisco in 1912 with a Russian Orthodox Priest

Blessings, Kisses and Battle
Hymn Speed Serb and Montenegrin Patriots on Way to War

Their brass band did not play "Onward Christian Soldiers", when the Serbians and Montenegrins left San Francisco yesterday for the war in the Balkans, but the young Slavs went forth Christian soldiers marching as to war with the benediction of two priests to speed them on their tour of 10,000 miles to fight for the freedom of their people, now under the heel of Turkey and Moslemism.

Father Paskovski of the Russian church, in a deep blue velvet cassock, marched at the head of the Serbs from their hall in Golden Gate Avenue near Laguna Street to the ferry. He bore a heavy golden cross and with the sacred symbol blessed the patriots.

At the hall those of the Roman Catholic faith were blessed by their pastor, Father Turk, of the Serbian Catholic church.

There was much of the music of war and the shouting of the forming legions, but there were also kisses and tears as the young Serbs bade farewell to their mothers, wives and sweet-hearts. The faces of the girls were bright with savor of military adventures, but the elderly women had tears for the youths who were marching away.⁴⁴

Many of these women knew the savagery of the Turk, they had seen his fury in the days when they dwelt in the austere black mountains near the frontier of the Ottoman empire in the path of the maurading Moslem and they knew that war could mean death as well as glory - that many of the youths who blithely left Market Street yesterday would not return from the battle field.

So they wept while their bright-faced daughters pinned flowers on the coats of the warriors and kissed them as sisters should and sweethearts might.

The march down Market Street was made with the band playing the Serbian battle hymn, "Rado Ide" which name may be rendered into English as "Willingly He Goes". Two hundred and fifty Serbians went willingly yesterday.

At the head of the column were carried four flags. Two of them were American flags, one was the red, white and blue emblem of the Serbian kingdom, with its royal arms on the tricolored field, and the other was the square Montenegrin flag, a red field, bordered by white, and bearing the war eagle of the fighting people of the black mountain country. The tops of the staffs bore knots of flowers and the scene in Market Street was vivid with the color of the banners flying in the sunlight, the richness of the priest's cassock and the picturesqueness of the native Montenegrin uniform worn by Ilya Vujanovich, one of the volunteers.

For several blocks behind the group of patriots marched their countrymen and countrywomen, each bearing two flags, an American banner and the tricolor of Serbia.

There were many women in line—pretty Dalmatian girls, strong Serbian women, with their arms filled with flowers to toss at the departing warriors.

In the line were Cedo Pavich, editor of the Serbian Herald, who left his classes at the University of California to enlist in his country's war. Bozo Gopceovich, Milo Martinovich, first cousin to King Nikola of Montenegro and uncle of the Montenegrin minister of war; Bozo Lazarevich and R. Vukich, who sold their business to go to war; George Cvetkovich, who left his cafe and billiard parlors to fight against the Turks; Spaso Milanovich, George Revarsky, Milorad Ajdukovich and more than 200 others.

Peter Gopceovich was marshal of the parade and his aides were Vladimir Popovich, John Sherovich, Milan Stanisich, Adam Verceovich and E.T. Balich, president of the Serbian National Defense League of San Francisco.

Among others prominent in the line of march was Stephen N. Mitrovich, a leader in the local Montenegrin colony, who will depart in a few days for the front, joining his comrades in New York. He is a veteran of the Montenegrin army, having fought in 1877 against the Turks. In addition to their banners, the Serbians bore a standard on which was the declaration, 'Serbians going to the front for justice and liberty.'

The start was made from the Serbian-Montenegrin club, Golden Gate Avenue near Laguna Street at 2:30 o'clock. The line of the parade, in which more than a thousand marched, was along Golden Gate to Van Ness Avenue, Van Ness to Market Street and down Market to the ferry, where the 250 volunteers embarked on the 4:20 boat for the Oakland mole, where a special train was waiting to take them to New York.

The volunteers are being sent to the front by the Serbian National Defense League, which furnishes the sinews of war. The fund is popular, and so far nearly $20,000 has been either paid in or subscribed. The various Slavonian societies have given sums ranging from $1,000 to $5,000 and individuals have come forward with cash in sums from $10 to $500. The Crocker National Bank has charge of the fund, and will receive subscriptions.

The following societies have subscribed: Serbian and Montenegrin Society, $5,000; Serbian Ladies Society, $1,000; Serbian National Fund, $1,000; Serbian Benevolent Society "Zeta" $1,000.

ROYAL RULERS MAY RACE YACHTS HERE

Lipton's Plan to Invite Crowned Heads to Participate in Exhibition Events

(Special Dispatch to The Call)
CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Sir Thomas Lipton, who is visiting in Chicago, is responsible for a movement toward the invitation of Emperor William of Germany, King George of Great Britain and King Alfonso of Spain to race their private yachts in the Pacific in the course of the expedition in 1915.

It is Sir Thomas' own little idea, and he is convinced that the right sort of action will be taken. He has already given several "talks" to the "Golden Gate" club in San Francisco, to confer with Captain C. Rogers, president of the club, as to ways and means of installing the idea of the royal yachts. The idea of the personal attendance of the monarchs is, he thinks, not probable, though one of them might come.

In his meeting with Rogers, Sir Thomas will discuss the best method of getting the boats through the canal and to San Francisco.

Lipton's own yacht, the Shamrock, will be the first to go through the canal in the wake of the great battleship fleets of all the world. One of his guests is likely to be the former Emperor Eugenie of France, who opened the Suez canal and was at Genoa Lipton's guest.

There was a conference in the apartment of Sir Thomas at the hotel in which Frank L. Brown, one of the directors of the expedition, was present.

The Serbian Society appropriated $9,338.75 for those volunteers not able to pay their travelling expenses and sent $5,000.00 to the Red Cross of the Kingdoms of Serbia and Montenegro.

During World War I the Society's relief and volunteer efforts reached major proportions.

On the eve of the war the Society numbered over 600 members. On the day Princip's gun was fired in Sarajevo, the Serbs of San Francisco celebrated their traditional Vidov Dan (St. Vitus Day) celebration commemorating the Serbian defeat by the Turks at the Battle of Kosovo in 1389.

The Society, along with all the other major Serbian organizations sponsored a picnic at Shuetzen Park in Marin County. They paraded through the streets of San Francisco led by mounted members of the SOKO (Falcon) Club, (a patriotic and athletic organization) behind Serbian and American flags and a band to such songs as "Rado ide Srbin u Vojnike" (Joyfully the Serb Goes to War).

After the outset of the war, the Society organized more groups of volunteers, some of them who had been participants in the 1912 struggle, named committees of assistance, urged noted Americans to help the Serbian cause and sent donations to the Red Cross of Serbia and Montenegro to the Yugoslav National Defense, to refugees from Hercegovina and even purchased two ambulances for the Salonika Front.

90 members volunteered for the Serbian, American and other Allied Armies and from its organization in 1915 to the end of the war, the Society's relief fund donated $29,648.48 for food, money, clothing and medicine.

San Franciscans asked to open purses to end suffering.

An appeal directed to all San Franciscans to help the distressed Serbian and Montenegrin peoples is being made by the Serbian-Montenegrin L and B Society, which has its headquarters at 1034 Golden Gate Avenue.

The call comes from president, John Kukaviza, who has appointed the following committee to take charge:

Chairman - Milan G. Stanisich

Treasurer - Vladimir Popovich

Secretary - John Sherovich

Financial Secretary - Lazar Dropo and Milan
Kukaviza

Milos Mandich, Bozo Matkovich, Ilija Gudelj, Mitar Skero and Mitar Vujanovich.

"Since 1912 the Serbians have been fighting" says Kukaviza, "and the misery and suffering of the people is beyond description. Homes have been destroyed, crops burned, and now the dreadful typhus has broken out among the soldiers. The people are dying by the hundreds from lack of medicine and medical supplies.

"The Serbian Red Cross is not able to attend to all of its people, as every bit of medicine and bandages have been used up. Will not the generous people of San Francisco come forward and help the Serbians in their hour of need? We hope in the name of humanity that they will."

San Francisco yesterday for the first time saw the Stars and Stripes carried down Market Street under the escort of United States troops side by side with the banners of its allies.

The companions of "Old Glory" were humble. The flag of the ancient Slav nation, consisting of Croatia, Dalmatia and Slavonia, which has not existed free for centuries, and the flag of Serbia floated alongside the Stars and Stripes.

Behind those banners and behind detachments of the Fourth and Fifth coast artillery from Fort Winfield Scott, were 125 Serbo-Croatian volunteers on their way to the Serb border on the Saloniki war front.

The 125 were a part of nearly 500 men who have enlisted in California among the South Slav races to join an army of 50,000 South Slav volunteers from the United States for duty on the Salonika front.

Nicola Djonovich, former editor of the Serbian paper, Justice, at Belgrade has done the recruiting. Under the arrangements made by him, another detachment will leave San Francisco Thursday, another Saturday and the remainder next week.

Serbians, Montenegrins, Dalmatians, Croatians and a sprinkling of Rumanians, composed yesterday's volunteers. As the men stood on the steps of the City Hall, Rev. Vasily Dvornikoff pleaded with them in Russian to fight for liberty. In the procession which marched from 1034 Golden Gate Avenue to pier 16, was a Pole near the age of three score and ten.

As the volunteers left their hall, some pretty South Slav girls saw that each wore a white and red carnation and a cornflower with a sprig of maiden-hair fern in his coat lapel.

There was one halt ... before the City Hall ... where the volunteers were addressed by Edward Rainey, secretary to Mayor James Rolph, Jr., and reviewed by Lieutenant-Commanders M.C. Gorgas, R. H. Minor and John S. Willis of the United States Navy.

And as the men departed from the city, the Fabris band played the "Rado Ide", or "Willing to Go."

As the volunteers left their hall some pretty South Slav girls saw that each wore a white and red carnation and a cornflower with a sprig of maiden-hair fern in his coat lapel.

There was one halt before the City Hall where the volunteers were addressed by Edward Rainey, secretary to Mayor James Rolph, Jr., and reviewed by Lieutenant-Commanders M. C. Gorgas, R. H. Minor and John S. Willis of the United States Navy.

And as the men departed from the city the Fabris band played the "Rado Ide" or "Willing to Go."

ACTING MAYOR HONORS SERBIAN HOLIDAY

Acting Mayor McLeran issued the following proclamation yesterday.

On next Saturday, January 26, occurs an anniversary which, to the little country of Serbia and to Serbians, scattered all over the world, means much in the way of a patriotic event. It is St. Sava's day, which for decade upon decade has been observed with deep feeling and solemnity.

This year St. Sava's day finds Serbia a country that is stricken and suffering. The people of Serbia are crushed and starving under the heel of the oppressor. Founded as a protest against the tyranny of the Turk, the little Slav nation has seen its freedom dissipated, its people brought to the brink of destruction.

It appeals to me as a most patriotic thing for the people of San Francisco to extend their sympathy to this country's ally, Serbia, on this occasion, and I make this public appeal, in the hope that it will bring some alleviation of the suffering of this brave but unfortunate people.

First Serbian Benevolent Society.

Serbians from San Francisco in American Army World War I

Major Accomplishments of the Society Since World War I

Originally founded as an essentially protective and social organization for Serbian immigrant laborers, toiling in a then distant corner of the world, the First Serbian Benevolent Society has today become a truly San Franciscan, Californian, and American institution.

The years between the First and Second World Wars were a period of consolidation of the Serbian institutions in America. The United States did not receive any major influx of Serbian immigrants during these years, rather a substantial number of immigrant laborers had returned to their homeland, either as volunteers for the Serbian and Montenegrin Armies in the Balkan Wars and World War I, or as returnees who left after the war to establish their homes in the new Yugoslav state (until 1929 named the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes).

In anticipation of the formation of this state, and the unification of the two Serbian Kingdoms, Serbia and Montenegro, under the Serbian Karadjeordjvich dynasty, the Society in late 1917 decided to change its name from The Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society to the First Serbian Benevolent Society.

Soon after the formation of the kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes, the Society sent two silver California saddles to the new King Alexander and his Queen Marie as a wedding present. Before the saddles could be shipped to Europe, the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce requested that they be publically displayed for the benefit of all San Franciscans. The Society donated one of the saddles in its name and one in the name of all Serbs in California.

During the interwar period, many Serbs in America purchased homes, established families, and raised what was probably the largest American-born generation of Serbs to date. Although, for the Bay Area, as one of the oldest Serbian settlements in America, the presence of American-born Serbs and Serbian-American homeowners was not a new occurrence.

With the increased number of American-born Serbs in the community during the interwar period, the Society organized in 1925, a Junior Order for the first time. The purposes of the Junior Order were beneficial, social and athletic. The Junior Order sponsored baseball and basketball teams, and even organized its own orchestra.

Earlier, at the time of the Balkan Wars, the Society had established a Senior auxiliary, the Dusan Silni Degree of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, which has existed ever since. The Dusan Silni Degree was named after the most powerful emperor of the medieval Serbian Nemanjich dynasty, Czar Stevan Dusan, known as Dusan Silni (Dushan the Mighty). Dusan the Mighty was not only famous for the size and strength of the Serbian state under his reign, but for endowing his empire with his famous "Zakonik" or Code of Laws, which was a fusion of Byzantine law and Serbian custom.

The Dusan Silni Degree was organized February 28, 1913 with the following Charter Members:

Lazar S. Churich	Andria Milinovich
Obren Cuckovich	Slavo Milisich
Mihail Dabizinovich	Vaso Milisich

Lazar L. Dropo	Milan Najariza
Mihail R. Gerunovich	Dushan Pavich
Stevo T. Gerunovich	Vladimir P. Popovich
Nikola Gjurovich	Ljubo Radinovich

Ilija J. Gudelj	Vaso Radinovich
George Ivelich	Iso Ramadanovich
Milan Kraljevich	Luka S. Radoicich
Milos Mandich	Ilija Rajkovich
Petar J. Mandich	John Seferovich
Lazar Marich	John Sherovich
Marko Matkovich	Todor Vucinich
Milo Mialovich	Risto Vujovich
Petar Mialovich	Dushan G. Vukovich
Vaso Mialovich	George G. Zlokovich

The first President of the Dusan Silni Degree was John Sherovich. The current board includes President, Petar J. Lucich, Vice President, Lazar J. Krzich, and Recording Secretary, Nick Milicevich.

The objects of the Dusan Silni Degree are social and beneficial, and it has been particularly renowned for its banquets, dinner dances and picnics.

Among the major events of the First Serbian Benevolent Society during the interwar years were the celebration of the Society's 50th anniversary, the completion of a chapel at the Society's cemetery in Colma, and the purchase of property for a Serbian Hall.

The Society celebrated its Golden Anniversary in 1930 with a gala banquet at San Francisco's Fairmont Hotel, the sight of the Society's 100th Anniversary celebration.

Ending the golden jubilee week celebration, the Society dedicated a Memorial Chapel at the Serbian Cemetery in Colma for all the members of the Society who lost their lives in the Serbian and other Allied Armies during World War I. To this list was later included a member who died while serving in the American Forces during World War II.

The Chapel was dedicated by the local Russian Orthodox Bishop Alexy and the Russian Orthodox priest Rev. Vladimir Sakovich.

In 1934 the Society bought the property at 225 Valencia Street, San Francisco, which was known as Serbian Hall, until the sale of this property by the Society in 1971. The Society remodeled this hall at a cost of $45,000.00, and in 1936 it was opened and dedicated to the Society's founders. It was at the time one of the finest halls owned by any South Slavic organization in America.

During World War II 32 members of the Society joined the ranks of the American Armed Forces. The Society donated $1,000.00 to the Yugoslav War Relief, and purchased $90,000.00 in United States War Bonds. Unfortunately, more can not be recounted about the Society's activities during World War II due to the disappearance of the Society's minutes for these years.

In the years following the War the Society revived its Athletic Section, and fielded a basketball team which participated in a number of Serbian Basketball Tournaments back East, and accomplished the feat of coming from way out West, to win a major Serbian-American tournament in Milwaukee, in the midst of the populous Serbian communities of the Midwest and East.

In 1955, Serbs from all parts of California and neighboring states gathered in San Francisco for the 75th Anniversary of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, which ended with a banquet at the St. Francis Hotel.

In recent years the Society has continued the relief activities it has been distinguished for throughout its history. In 1963 when an earthquake devastated the capital of Yugoslav Macedonia, Skopje, the Society immediately sent $1,000.00 in relief and organized committees to collect funds for the relief of the inhabitants and rebuilding of their city.

On April 15, 1979, Yugoslavia's worst earthquake in 75 years devastated 120 miles of the Adriatic Coast from Dubrovnik to Ulcinj. The quake's epicenter was located in the Boka Kotorska and Pastrovich region from which many of the Society's members originated. The Board of Directors of the First Serbian Benevolent Society held a special meeting April 18, 1979 to discuss sending aid to victims of the disaster.

The Society sent donations of $5,000 each to the hospitals in Kotor, and Bar in Montenegro.

The Minutes of the Society lists yearly donations to major American charities such as the Red Cross, Cancer Society, and March of Dimes.

The minutes of the First Serbian Benevolent Society list numerous donations to Serbian Orthodox churches and monasteries throughout the United States and also in Yugoslavia. Among the most notable donations have been $1,000 for the St. George Church in Oakland, California when this parish was in the process of organization, in 1924, $5,000 for the new St. Archangel Michael Serbian Orthodox Church in Saratoga, and $10,000 for an olympic style swimming pool for the children's summer camp at the St. Sava Serbian Orthodox Mission in Jackson, California. The later two donations were both made in 1962.

In 1954 during the construction of the St. John the Baptist Serbian Orthodox Church of San Francisco, the First Serbian Benevolent Society donated $7,000 for the Ikonostas, to serve as an Eternal Memorial to all its founders.

The Society also donated toward the construction of the first Serbian Orthodox monastery in the United States and Canada, the St. Sava Monastery in Libertyville, Illinois, and toward the restoration of the historic Dobricevo Monastery near Bileca, Hercegovina, which dates from the 15th century.

Society Meeting and Initiation of New Members.

In recent years the Society has oriented many activities toward attracting the participation of young American Serbs. The Society established a Scholarship Fund, which was originally founded by the endowment of the late Brother Velisha Perich. Scholarships have been awarded to members' children and a number of the younger members of the Society. The Society also reorganized and reactivated the Junior Order, after a few years of inactivity, and much of the Society's focus in recent years has centered on plans to make the Junior Order a cultural, social, and athletic meeting place for all the Serbian Youth of the Bay Area and Northern California. The Junior Order of the FSBS can serve as a good will ambassador among young American Serbs in neighboring and more distant Serb American communities.

Junior Order FSBS

One of the largest membership drives in the recent history of the Society took place during the first year of leadership of the current President, Milorad Golubovich. In the course of 1974, 21 new members joined the Society, most of them young American-born Serbs. While continuing to attract new immigrants from Yugoslavia, the largest proportion of the Society's newer members are American-born Serbs, among them third and even fourth generation members of the Society. Johnny Krzich, the grandson of current Vice President Lazar Krzich is a fourth generation member. Many of the new members join out of family tradition and respect for the Society's reputation among Serb-American organizations.

The First Serbian Benevolent Society owns one of, if not the most beautiful of the Serbian cemeteries in America located in Colma, San Mateo County, California. The first plot of land was purchased in 1900, and the Serbian Cemetery was established in 1901. At the Serbian Cemetery are buried Serbs from all over the western United States. The cemetery has also come to serve many of the Russian Americans in the San Francisco Bay Area, which has one of the largest concentrations of Russians in the United States.

The Serbian Cemetery was expanded in the 1950's with the purchase of 11 acres at a cost of $100,000.00. Continual work is done to expand and beautify the grounds.

In 1972 the Cemetery Trustees built an outdoor Mausoleum at the cost of $350,000.00, and at the same time the Chapel was rebuilt. In the past few years the Society has reinstated the Celebration of the Patron Saint of the First Serbian Benevolent Society Velika Gospojina (Assumption of the All-Holy Mother of God), at the Cemetery Chapel.

The greatest number of the Society's present members live in the San Francisco Bay Area but are spread widely throughout the Bay Area counties. Most of the remaining members live in other parts of Northern California, followed by Southern California and the Pacific Northwest. A few members are scattered in other parts of the United States, and even in Yugoslavia. The present membership numbers 276, making it the largest Serbian organization in the San Francisco Bay Area, in which are located a number of Serbian Orthodox Church parishes and other Serbian organizations.

The individual members of the Society are found in a wide range of occupations and numbered among its ranks are doctors, lawyers, judges, college professors, business executives, engineers, prominent building contractors, ranchers, and successful restaurateurs. Many of the Society's members are not only active in other Serbian organizations such as the Serbian National Defense Council and the Serbian National Federation, but many belong to the Masonic Order and other major American fraternal and charitable organizations. Others have become important civic leaders in their local communities.

One hundred years after its founding, the Society and its members have entered the mainstream of American society. In future years it is hoped that the Society continues its social, cultural and beneficial contributions, for the good of the Serbian-American community and for the general American community, proud of its American heritage, and respectful of the traditions of its pioneer founders.

75 Year Members and the Oldest Living President

In honor of two of our members who have been active in the First Serbian Benevolent Society for 75 years, three-fourths of the Society's lifespan, we are reprinting their biographies as they appeared in the Jugoslav American Herald of December 4, 1959.

These two men are fitting representatives of the Serbian pioneers who established our first institutions in America. Their backgrounds reflect the origins of many of our California Serbs.

Obren Cuckovich was born in the rugged mountains of Hercegovina near the town of Bileca and the border of the one-time independent Serbian kingdom of Montenegro. Hercegovina, much like neighboring Montenegro, has often been described as a land of poets and warriors. The people of the Bileca district played a leading role in many of the Serbian struggles for independence from Ottoman and Habsburg rule, such as the famed Nevesinje insurrection of 1875. Only a short distance from Obren's native village is the Hercegovinian town of Trebinje, birthplace of the distinguished Serbian poet Jovan Ducich.

Bob Konevich was born in Sutorina near the town of Herceg Novi, at the entrance to the Bay of Kotor (Boka Kotorska). Sutorina was formerly where Hercegovina met the Adriatic Sea, but is now included as part of the Montenegrin coast, famed for its resorts and historic Serbian churches and monasteries.

The seamen of the Boka Kotorska traveled throughout the world, and are famed for their maritime exploits. As we see from his biography, Bob Konevich's heritage is firmly steeped in this seafaring tradition.

To all those who are acquainted with these gentlemen, we need not mention that their contributions to the Serbian community have not diminished in the least since the original publication of these articles over twenty years ago. They remain two of the most active members of the Serbian community and the First Serbian Benevolent Society.

Obren Cuckovich

There are men and women in our community who have not attained enormous wealth as some have been able to, but who have contributed perhaps more than many wealthy ones to our communtiy work and the success of our organization. Such a man is Obren Cuckovich, a prominent Oakland, California resident.

Obren was born near Bileca, Hercegovina, and came to San Francisco in April 1906 just three days before the San Francisco earthquake. Like many others, he at the beginning did odd jobs and learned English. In 1911 he went into business in partnership with the late Steve Gerunovich. In 1917 he took over the well-known Acme Grill, one of the oldest restaurants in Oakland for which he had been working in 1906. Later, he took his brother Milan into partnership.

However, despite the expansion of his business Obren was very active in community affairs and especially helped financially and morally the war cause of the Serbian people in Europe when they fought for the liberation of Serbs under foreign domination. When the Serbian National Defense Council was organized he was a leading member and has been active ever since supporting its cause. Likewise, in the First Serbian Benevolent Society, which he joined in 1906, he has worked hard to attain leadership among Serbs in the Bay Area. As a recognition Obren was elected President and was a long-standing member of the Society's Board of Directors. He has served in many other important positions in this Society.

However, he has also been active in many American organizations and especially in community work for the welfare of the people of Oakland. He entered the Masonic Order in 1940. His political activity was crowned with a great success when he was elected President of the Slavonic Alliance, which was at the time a very important Slavic political organization in the State of California.

In addition to his many active positions in the community Obren was also connected with the Jugoslav American Herald. In 1943, during World War II, he was elected President of the Yugoslav Publishing Company, which at that time owned the Jugoslav American Herald.

However, the most important work he did for the Serbian Orthodox community in Oakland was when he, with other church-loving men and women, organized the St. George Parish in Oakland. Ever since, he has been a member of the parish to which he contributed liberally.

He married Sophia Vukasovich and they had two children - Sam (Savo) and his late daughter Doris (Danica), who was married to Savo Dragisich.

Obren is yet another example of a foreign-born American who has risen to a place of importance in the United States because of his energy and ability. More than this, he is a man of great popularity due to his many good works and the fact that the people recognize in him a true leader.

Nikola Shabovich

Joined First Serbian Benevolent Society on October 3, 1906. Presently residing in Hollywood, California. Born in Mojdez, Boka Kotorska.

Bob Konevich - World War I

Bozo (Bob) Konevich

Bob (Bozo) Konevich can claim to be a li descendant of one of the first Serbs to enter Francisco, for his father, the late sea captain I Konevich, sailed into the then small port in 18 the windjammer "Freedom" owned by Lloyd London.

However, his father did not stay in the ci which his son Bozo came in 1905 to become a m. great value to the Serbian and other Yugoslav or izations in the Bay Area.

Upon his arrival Bob Konevich joined the Serbian Benevolent Society and has been an a member ever since, serving as President, Treas and a member of the Board of Directors. His fir in the city had been selling newspapers and ear fifty cents per day.

During World War I Bob joined the U.S. Army served two years and nine months, during whic took part in many field actions.

After the war he was employed by PG & E for t years. Soon after, he went into the restau business for over thirty years.

Bob Konevich is still very active in the Ser community. For years he was a member of Serbian Club and an officer of the First Ser Benevolent Society. Bob is an active member o St. John the Baptist Serbian Orthodox Church San Francisco.

He is also active in the Masonic Lodge. In 19: became a charter member of the Yugoslav Mas Lodge, and was also its President. In 194 married Milena Lepetich, a member of a pic Serbian family of Amador County.

MILTON K. LEPETICH APPOINTED SAN FRANCISCO LIBRARY COMMISSIONER

Milton K. Lepetich, San Francisco Library Commissioner.

All the Yugoslav colony in San Francisco will be very glad to hear the news of Mr. Milton K. Lepetich's appointment by Mayor Christopher to the San Francisco City Library Commission.

Mr. Lepetich has already served two terms on the Library Commission as an opponent of Mayor Mayor John S. Harrison.

Mayor George Christopher, who is now running for reelection, has been fair in giving representation to the Americans of Yugoslav descent in proportion with other nationality groups. Another younger American Yugoslav, John Gurch, a well-known Republican leader, is already serving on the same Commission. It is indeed, very unique that two "brother Slavs" are now taking care of the city institution, essential for the education and general knowledge of adults and students. Congratulations Mr. Lepetich.

Milton K. Lepetich

The oldest living President of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, Milton K. Lepetich, has been one of the most active members of the Bay Area Serbian community, as well as a prominent participant in San Francisco's business and civic affairs.

Milton (Micho) Lepetich was born in 1889 in the village of Mokrine near Herceg Novi, Boka Kotorska. He arrived in San Francisco in 1903, and excepting a brief period spent in the Mother Lode mining town of Angels Camp, he has been a resident of the City ever since.

To record the Serbian organizations that Milton Lepetich has been active in one must list practically every Serbian institution in the Bay Area. Along with the First Serbian Benevolent Society, he has been a member, often serving as President and officer of such organizations as; the St. George Serbian Orthodox Church Oakland, California, Serbian National Defense Council, Dusan Silni Higher Degree, F.S.B.S., St. John the Baptist Serbian Orthodox Church, San Francisco, and the Serbian Club. Milton was also very active in the Slavonic Alliance, and in the 1920's published a Serbian language magazine Srpska Otadzbina (Serbian Fatherland) in San Francisco.

Milton was proprietor of a men's clothing store and an insurance broker.

Milton's varied activities surely make him one of the most distinguished members of the San Francisco Serbian community.

Correspondence With, and Tributes to the Society

For the many contributions it made to the Serbian people and the Serbian cause in America and Europe, the First Serbian Benevolent Society has received expressions of gratitude from countless individuals, including kings, princes, bishops of the Church, patriotic leaders, and poets. As profound expressions of gratitude and indications of respect for the Society's accomplishments, a number of poems were written in honor of the Society and its founders. By collecting these poems and translating them into English, we hope to make them accessible to greater numbers of American Serbs.

In memory of one of the Society's founders, Vladimir Jovovich, Lazar S. Churich composed an elegy in 1905, which was later published in the Yugoslav-American literary review Novi Zivot (New Life) in San Francisco, June, 1927. Lazar S. Churich served as President of the First Serbian Benevolent Society of the years 1910, 1911, and 1921. He was very active in Serbian-American literary affairs, and was known among Serbs throughout the United States for his poetic lament of the plight of the Serbian immigrant miner, Pod Zemljom u Americi (Under the Ground in America), and his play, Bokeljev San u Americi (The Bokelian Dream in America), which was performed by numerous Serb-American theatrical groups. He was a native of Igalo, Boka Kotorska.

Vladimir Jovovich, of whom he wrote, was along with his brother Jovan one of the eight founding members of the Serbian Society. They were natives of Risan, Boka Kotorska, and pioneer San Francisco saloon keepers. Jovan died in 1885, while still in his twenties. Vladimir, prior to his death in 1902, was last surviving founder to still hold membership in the Society. He had been continually one of the Society's most active members and had also served the Serbian community as an officer of the Orthodox Church and Benevolent Society, and a director of the Serbian Literary Club and local Serbian language newspaper Sloboda.

Niko Musich was a widely traveled Serbian immigrant poet. In a collection of his poems published in Pittsburgh, Pa. in 1904, Razne Pjesme Nika Musica (Various Poems of Niko Musich), are found two poems relating to the First Serbian Benevolent Society. His poem Rastko Nemanjich (Saint Save) deals with the most revered Serbian Orthodox Saint, enlightener, and first Archbishop of the independent Serbian Orthodox Church, whose holiday was honored and celebrated for years by the First Serbian Benevolent Society. Musich's other poem written at the Society's cemetery in Colma, and in it he mentions the names of many of the Bay Area Serbian colony's earliest pioneers who are buried there.

Petar Perunovich was one of the most respected guslars (folk bards who sang epic tales from the Serbian past playing the traditional one-stringed musical instrument of the Serbs, the gusle) of the 20th century. His talents were recognized by Serbs wherever they lived, and he was particularly beloved by a generation of Serb-American youths for his role as their teacher. He visited Serbian communities all over the United States, instilling in the Serbian youth an appreciation of their heritage, and the beauty of the Serbian language. Petar Perunovich composed a beautiful poem in honor of the First Serbian Benevolent Society on the occasion of its 45th anniversary in 1925.

Another poem that was especially treasured by the members of the First Serbian Benevolent Society was received in 1898 from the poet Jovan Sundeichich, after bestowing on him honorary membership in the Society. Jovan Sundeichich was an orthodox priest, seminary professor, editor, and renowned poet whose career spanned many regions of the Serbian homeland. He was an apostle of Slavic brotherhood, and had once served as the personal secretary of then Prince Nicholas I of Montenegro. The correspondence between the Society and Jovan Sundeichich has been preserved in the Society's minutes. Due to the historical significance of the correspondence between the Society and this worthy Serbian poet, we are printing both the Society's letter to Sundeichich and the poet's reply in which his poem is included.

Most honored sir:

The undersigned board of the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society has the honor to inform you that at its past meeting, upon the motion of Vladimir P. Popovich, you were unanimously chosen as an honorary member of this Society.

Happy that we are able to inform you of this, we are today sending your Diploma of Honorary Membership, as a token of our deep respect toward our Serbian poet upon the occasion of the 50th anniversary of your work for the benefit and progress of the Serbian Literary field.

Doing this we wish that you might also celebrate the 75th anniversary of your worthy efforts for the benefit of the Serbian nation.

And, as in all this past time, you wrote, teaching love and unity, with Serbian pride and sentiment, we wish that you will live, and in the future write of the United Serbian Kingdom.

With deepest respect from all of us and in the name of the "Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society" accept honored Sir, our sincerest Serbian regards.

Respecting your celebrated works and sharing heartily in your golden anniversary.

"Worthy Board"

The very thought that my dear compatriots and close brothers in far off San Francisco would so beautifully remember me; would be sufficient to make me proud and lift my spirit to heaven. -But the fact that my dearest brothers have honored me so greatly by choosing me as an honorary member of their renowned society and sending me their beautiful diploma, this fact is so filled with warm love of homeland, so full of high regard for me that I am at a loss for words with which I could express my deepest and sincerest gratitude; not only to the Board, but to every member of the Society individually. It is impossible for me to be with you in person; but in spirit I will be with you until the end of my life. Every progress and fortune of yours will give me joy; and more, I will fervently pray to the dear God, that our most High Father would bless your every effort as much as for your good as for the blessing of our Serbian nation and all the Slavs.

To the Serbian-Montenegrin Society for Benevolence and Literature in San Francisco.

Forward, brother, forward
In vivifying freedom:
Love ye one another
Love your nation too!

Keep your shoulders
Pressed brother to brother;
God's sun of good fortune
Eternally shine for you!

Two altars have we:
The first to our God.
Then follows after God
The altar of our nation.

Before them we worship
With all the fervor in our breasts.
And let each of us bring
His mite of offering.

Forward, brothers, forward!
God will be our help:
May we all soon rejoice
In the resurrection of our Nation!

I was unable to earlier return my debt to you as the physician would not allow me any writing due to my health. Even though late, but surely sincerely, I am convinced that my brothers will accept this belated reply as cordially as it is sent and I warmly press each and everyone to my heart and greet all with a sweet kiss upon your heroic brows.

Many years to the glorious Serbian-Montenegrin Society of San Francisco. Many years to the Serbian people!

Many years to all the Slavs! Many years to brotherly love, without which no nation can be reborn nor reach its national independence and blessed human liberty.

To my brethren a most cordial greeting, with expression of my warmest respect.

In Memoriam of Vladimir Jovovich

When a new grave is dug in the cemetery of our countrymen
We remember all those Buried here long ago.
You read the names on the crosses and monuments
You remember others who died long ago
But as soon the graves are covered with grass
All, with time, are forgotten.
You expired dear Vladimir
But memory of you did not expire with you.
For, never a day has passed
Nor a happy, brotherly get-together that your name is not mentioned
And memories of you are not revived.
Among the Serbs of this City
Everyone remembers something about you.
Your good humor and appropriate jokes
Your patriotic nature they all praise.
Because of love they called you Vlado
And out of friendship they called you Jado
Whether a Serbian song is aloud
Or Serbianism is discussed
Aoh Vlado! like you there are no more.
You were always among the first.
At the dances or singing parties
Among young men or young women
You brought laughs and excitement
Even those not blessed
With singing talent and ability
You made alive and heard
With you even they sang.

When a new generation of technology is introduced the old generation is often discarded. This is the case with the new generation of computers.
The old generation of computers is being replaced by the new generation of computers.
The new generation of computers is more powerful and faster
than the old generation.
The new generation of computers is also more reliable and easier to use. The new generation of computers is the future of computing.

On Serbian Cemetery in Colma by San Francisco, California

Here I am, in Serbian Cemetery
In midst of a distant foreign land
Where great number of my brothers and friends lie buried.

Grieving I stand, thinking...thinking,
All around my eyes are looking,
nowhere a living soul,
Over the dead I stand - alone, alone!

Marble cross, magnificent rising over splendid stone
With head bowed I approach
This beautiful cross nearer.

On it in cirilic letters
It tells me a name well known
Old Lazo
Many here are proud of him.

I knew him well while still alive
I knew them almost all
Whom in this Serbian Cemetery
Foreign soil now covers.

Lazar with the brothers and a nephew
In the finest grave is resting
Mighty hand of another nephew
Donated this eternal home.

Here are the graves of Dabovich
Luke Balich, Zenovich
Praiseworthy and deserving
And the grave of Niko Stanisich.

And others! Where are others?
They are all over the Cemetery,

Very simple and unknown -
It is even hard to find them.

Ordinary stones, wooden crosses
Mark almost all the graves
Pencil writing on the crosses
Says who is buried thereunder.

Some are even without crosses
In such short a time
Does anybody ask - who are these?
We don't know what to answer.

Who lies here? A leader?
A veteran of the Colony,
large family did he leave
Not concerned about the dead!

His two sons, grown men already,
Wealthy they are, many say
From their father got it all
Will they give him marble stone?

Rest, in eternal peace, rest!
Selfish you were always
You reap what you sow
Oblivion met you fast.

All kinds of marble stones
I see all around
Under each and every stone
Lies a member of Serbian Society
Thank you Society for remembering
Your deceased members
Society, long recognized
By foreigners as progressive.

Oh, beloved friends of mine
Now hidden by black soil

You are remembered by my soul
In which admiration shines for you all.

Stanisich, Popovich
It is getting dark, night shall come
Worthy Vlado Jovovich,
Serbian Cemetery, Good Night!

Poem by Petar Perunovich
Guslar Perun od Kosova Ravna
To the Society on 45th Anniversary

It was long time ago, but still remembered
When Serbs first started
A long journey, from Serbian lands
To far away America.

Like bees from mountain bee-hives
Flying to richly scented flowers
Sweet honey to collect for themselves
Travelled the Serbs out to the world, and God knows what would have happened,
Many of them, would have been lost by now
Had they not joined their own societies.

Those who started first are among the best
First Serbian Benevolent Society
On the ocean side by the Golden Gate
In the balmy land of California
Under one roof they started to gather
Servian brothers from the Slavic South
Good Society, as a good mother
Embracing all children in her bosom
Received all members into its ranks
And through all long hardships and tribulations
For forty five long years
Protected them in this foreign land
Not to lose their glorious name

Serbian name and Orthodox faith
Taught them to breathe like Milos did
To write and speak Serbian
And when time came to fight the war
Shed Serbian blood for freedom and liberty
Of all brothers in Yugoslavia
First Serbian Benevolent Society
Sent out from its midst
To the battlefields of the war
Montenegro and glorious Serbia
Young men, young and unmarried
Supplied them with food and clothing
Filled their pockets with the money
Decorated them with Serbian colors
Escorted them with songs and tears
To the sacred war for freedom
And when news started to come
From battlefields of gray falcons
That some heroes had fallen
That some have died from bitter wounds
Society raised them to the glory
Wiped the tears of all grieving
Cured the wounds of the wounded
Distributed food and clothing to the orphans
First Serbian Benevolent Society, that
To the honor of Serbs and Slavs
Served for forty-five years
As hope of its people
May glory be yours for eternity
To your deceased members
God give peace and life in paradise
To your living members congratulations
On your celebrations and festivities
And health and happiness to all.

Rastko Nemanjic'

St. Sava

Dedicated to "Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society" in San Francisco

Every Serb, with pompous pride celebrates glorious Nemanjic'
Inspired with exalted patriotism
Pays homage to his shepherd Sava.

His shepherd, son of mighty and heroic Serbian ruler.
St. Sava, joyfully recognized as first fighter for enlightenment.

Young Rastko, royal crown he renounced
Monastic robe he accepted
With the bible and book of wisdom
He started his beloved people to enlighten.

Loved by humble and the mighty
Bizantium granted him honor at the request of all people
Recognized him as First Patriarch of Serbs.

Colossal vigor of his power
On Serbian Church he bestowed
At the threshold of enlightenment
Orthodoxy Sava strengthened.

And when Serbian kingdom crumbled
When cursed Turks enslaved us
For freedom and Christian Orthodoxy
Every Serb was willing to die.

And even today, seven long centuries
After the death of great shepherd
On St. Sava Day, joy triumphs
In every Serb's soul.

Even now we in this foreign land
Far away from our native place
Celebrating St. Sava's Day
Are united in thought with our Fatherland

This our first Serbian Society
Which for quarter of a century abroad
On name's day bows in joy and happiness
To the greatness of Serbian Father Sava.

He deserves veneration and praise
From everyone with Serbian name
In the bosom lives with pride
In foreign lands to be proud of him!

"Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society in San Francisco:

I have received the letter and check of 5 English liras and 5 shillings which your Society sent for the relief of those who suffered from the flood in Montenegro. This donation I have forwarded to the committee.

The members of the committee asked me to express their gratitude to your Society on their behalf, which I herewith do.

It is especially gratifying to me that I have been given the opportunity to send my episcopal blessings to the members of the Society and all our brethren beyond the sea.

With cordial greetings,

“Respected and dear brethren, glorious Serbs.

The committee for the relief of those who suffered from the flood had the joy to receive your brotherly help of five liras sterling, 5 shillings and one pence.

It is especially gratifying to us that you, so very far removed from us, remember your brethren in distress, and according to your means, witness your patriotism and brotherly feelings.

We are happy that you in San Francisco have the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society in which you foster the national precepts and customs, and in that far off land have preserved yourself, and will, we hope in the merciful Lord God, preserve yourselves in the future through the intercessions of St. Sava in whose memory you have erected God’s holy temple.

Thanking you for the help sent to the suffering in Serbia, we call upon God’s blessing on all who gave their donation for the help of their brethren, and all those who worked for the preservation of the Serbian name in America, and pray God that He keep and grant his beneficence to all of you according to his mercy, which will bring comfort to all here and especially to your well-wisher and intercessor before God.

The Metropolitan of Serbia
MIHAILO

Beograd, 26 March, 1897

Epilogue

The San Francisco Bay Area Serbian-American community holds the distinction of being the oldest permanent Serbian settlement in the United States. It is also the birthplace of the first Serbian beneficial, cultural, literary and religious institutions in America. Among the members of the present day Bay Area Serbian community are descendents and relatives of the original Gold Rush pioneers, primarily Serbs from the southern Adriatic coastal regions of present day Yugoslavia; Boka Kotorska, Hercegovina, and Montenegro.

The oldest and largest Serbian organization in the Bay Area and the first Serbian Society founded in America is the First Serbian Benevolent Society. This society, which was originally named the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society celebrated its 100th Anniversary on May 3, 1980 with a gala banquet in the grand ballroom of San Francisco's Fairmont Hotel. The banquet was attended by approximately 500 members, members' wives and guests from the Bay Area, Sacramento, Fresno, Jackson and from many other California communities as well as out of state.

After the reception and cocktail hour in the Terrace Room, the guests were greeted by the music of the Johnny Vaughn Orchestra at the entrance of the Grand Ballroom.

The banquet commenced with the playing of the American and Serbian National Anthems. The Grand Ballroom was decorated with banners of the Serbian-Montenegrin Literary and Benevolent Society and First Serbian Benevolent Society. Banners which had been carried by the members in parades at the time of the Balkan Wars and World War I. The banners were displayed above the head table between the American and Serbian flags. The invocation was given by Archimandrite Theodor Micka, the pastor of St. George Serbian Orthodox Church in Oakland and a member of the First Serbian Benevolent Society.

A large contingent of Serbian Orthodox priests were present including V. Rev. Dusan Bunjevich of San Francisco, Rev. Milivoje Djordjevich of Cupertino, V. Rev. Alexander Ivanovich of Saratoga, and Rev. Dr. Krstivoj Kotur of Fresno.

The Master of Ceremonies for the evening was John P. Vukasin, Jr., a judge of the Superior Court of the State of California and third generation member of the First Serbian Benevolent Society. Judge Vukasin opened the proceedings with the introduction of the current officers of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, the Society's Board of Directors, and the Boards of the Dusan Silni High Degree and the Junior Order. Special commemorative plaques were presented to the Board Members.

The current President of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, Milorad V. Golubovich greeted the membership and guests emphasizing the importance of the event honoring those pioneers who gathered together far from their homeland to lay the cornerstone for the first Serbian institution in America. President Golubovich looked to beginning the second century in the life of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, recalling both the successes and the difficulties encountered by the Society during its first hundred years in order that the Society might continue its task of unifying the Serbian people in peace, harmony, and the spirit of fraternal love. He stressed that the role of the Society was not only to build a strong Serbian-American community, but also to strengthen America's future.

Following the President's remarks a special award was presented to the Society's Vice President Lazar J. Krzich in appreciation for his many years of service to the Society and in particular for his contributions made toward the care and beautification of the Society's cemetery in Colma, California.

Vice President Krzich had the honor to present plaques to the Society's 75 year members Obren Cuckovich and Bob (Bozo) Konevich. These two venerable pioneers received standing ovations. Another 75 year member Nikola Shabovich was not able to attend the banquet. Also absent was Milton Lepetich who was honored that evening as the oldest living president of the First Serbian Benevolent Society. Awards were also presented to a member of 72 years Risto Vujovich, a 70 year member Bogdan Murisich and new 50 year members George Alexich, Bill Stepanicich, Steve Vickers, Radovan Radulovich, Dan Tarana and Ely Krzich. The later three were not able to receive their awards in person.

For the first time in the history of the Society special awards were presented to the descendents of two late past presidents of the Society, Jovo Shero- vich and Stevo Gudelj. These awards which were presented by the President of the Dusan Silni High Degree of the First Serbian Benevolent Society, Peter Lucich, honored two of the Society's most active presidents of the twentieth century.

Special awards were presented to Ched Ristich and Nikola Vucinich and to the current president Milorad V. Golubovich who has served the Society untiringly in this capacity since 1974.

The Society's first minutes of April 2 and May 3, 1880 were read by one of the younger members of the First Serbian Benevolent Society William Davidovich. His presentation brought about a moment of great admiration for the pioneers who established the first Serbian institution in America and the many personal sacrifices they made that enabled the Society to labor and grow over the past 100 years.

Among the honored guests at the banquet was a former mayor of San Francisco George Christopher a Greek-American well acquainted with the local Serbian community. Mayor Christopher commented on how proud the members must be to continue the obligations begun 100 years ago and stressed the importance of preserving Serbian American heritage and traditions, and in particular he highlighted the central importance of the Serbian Orthodox Church for the Serbian community and the necessity of a unified church.

Letters and telegrams were received and read from President Jimmy Carter, Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr., former Governor Ronald Reagan, Mayor Diane Feinstein and a number of other dignitaries and Society members including Archimandrite Dositei Obradovich of Butte, Montana.

The keynote speaker for the Anniversary was State Senator Rose Ann Vuich, a Serb-American from Dinuba, California. Senator Vuich was the first woman elected to the State Senate in the history of the California legislature. Senator Vuich discussed the pride in one's ethnic heritage and the importance of American citizenship and commitment with examples from her own background and career.

Following the benediction by Rev. Dr. Krstivoj Kotur of St. Peter the Apostle Serbian Orthodox Church of Fresno, California the evening concluded with dancing to the Johnny Vaughn Orchestra and Serbian dancing to the music of accordianist Dusan Milunovich.

Membership List of the
First Serbian Benevolent Society
1880-1980

It is the author's desire that along with the members names be listed their places of birth. Unfortunately, the members' birthplaces have not always been recorded in a consistent manner. Occasionally only the province or state is listed, in some instances the names of towns or villages may have been misspelled. Since the early 1960's, the member's birthplaces have no longer been recorded in the minutes of the Society upon their election to membership. Despite these inconsistencies and omissions, the author feels that the inclusion of the member's birthplaces will serve as an important historical document in itself, and will be of use to geneologists and writers interested in the origin and composition of the people of California. This information should also prove useful to many Californians of Serbian heritage who may be interested in determining the location of the province, town, or village of Yugoslavia from which their ancestors originated.
